Nats, Beaten 6-1, Return to Show Before President

Players Cheered At Union Station

By Shirley Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post.)

The world series moves its trappings to Washington today where the Nats, who limped back from New York last night nursing the wounds of two defeats, resume their baseball death struggle with the Giants before Presidential pomp and dignity.

Graced by the presence of President Roosevelt, Postmaster General James A. Farley, and other members of the Cabinet who have reserved a box seat section at Griffith Stadium, the series shifts from the sidewalks of New York to the shadow of the Capitol; from a la carte to table d'hote, as it were.

Greeted by throngs at Union Station last night like conquering heroes rather than like beaten favorites, the Nats were grim, defiant, despite their 6-to-1 defeat of yesterday.

Goslin Slams Homer.

A home run by Goose Goslin that skyrocketed into the upper tier of the right-field bleachers loomed large and luminous, lighting the way to victory for Washington, in the second game of the world this afternoon or five full innings yesterday—and then the Nats were disillusioned.

Came the sixth inning and the release of the floodgates by Al Crowder. Six Giant runs cascaded across the plate; six death-dealing runs swept away Washington's 1-0 lead that had sputtered but had refused to die; six swift, sudden runs buried the Nats under a 6-1 score, and the second game of the series passed into the keeping of the New York club.

Have Strangle Hold.

With bats belching base hits—eight of them—in a sustained barrage in that sixth inning, the Giants laid waste to the offerings of Crowder and planted the standard of the National League in a commanding position atop the world series situation. This morning the Giants have a strangle hold on the championship.

With bludgeon and with rapier, with clout and with bunt the Giants in that sixth inning struck to hew away the Nats' lead and convey to the Washington club that here was a foe that was relentless, dangerous and mighty. It is a heavy National League tone that now decorates the world series battlefield.

Many Stay Away.

Fewer than 40,000 were in the Polo Grounds to witness the complete eclipse of the Nats by the Giants yesterday, as New York, with that queer New York crowd psychology, stayed away in great numbers from a ball game that found

U. S. Demands Brokers' Data In Income Quiz

Accounts of Customers Will Be Scanned in Sweeping Drive.

Cooperation of brokerage houses in a nation-wide drive against fraudulent income tax returns has been asked by the Treasury's Internal Revenue division in expectation of an order to brokers to furnish information concerning customers' accounts.

The companys' will be directed chiefly against tax payers who have made enormous reports of sales of securities so as to establish losses.

"There will be no prosecution of any person who, under a misapprehension filed an inaccurate return," Commissioner of Internal Revenue Guy T. Helvering said last night.

Will Issue Order Soon.

There are instances, he said, where individuals have sold securities to their secretaries or relatives, who were not in position to buy in the amounts involved, and subsequently have repurchased the securities without a bona fide sale having been made.

The inquiry will be directed chiefly to returns made for the years 1929 to 1932. Commissioner Helvering expects to issue an order soon to all brokers requiring information relative to the accounts of each customer.

Letters were addressed yesterday to brokerage houses in New York informing them of the commissioner's pending order, so they could begin preparation of the required data. None has been sent to local brokers.

Information Sought.

In general, the inforamtion to be required by the commissioner's order calls for the name and address of the customer and the amount of his debit or credit balance at the close of each year.

This is the first time detailed information concerning private transactions of brokers' clients has been requested.

Missouri Assembly Called on Repeal

Governor Outlines Action for Session Oct. 17.

Jefferson City, Mo., Oct. 4 (AP).—Repeal of the Missouri prohibition law and legislation to regulate the liquor business in event of repeal of the eighteenth amendment was recommended by Gov. Guy B. Park today in calling the Legislature to meet October 7.

He recommended increase in the beer tax and a general sales tax, a gross sales tax, or any other constitutional method of raising revenue.

He suggested removal of the 5-cent general revenue tax for State purposes and changes in statutes to permit State participation in relief legislation passed by Congress.

Glass-Pecora Clash Marks Banking Quiz

11 Partners Sold Stock Costing $14,809 for $4,000,000.

Pool operations with large profits yesterday held attention of the Senate Banking Committee at hearings enlivened by frequent clashes between Senator Glass, (Democrat), Virginia, and Ferdinand Pecora, committee counsel.

Witnesses told how 11 Dillon, Read & Co. officials, through a pool managed by Dominick & Dominick, sold for $4,000,000 in the open market, shares originally costing $14,809. The pool was in stock of the United States & Foreign Securities Corporation, organized by Dillon, Read & Co.

Robert E. Christie, jr., a partner of the firm, and president nominee of the Investment Bankers Association, detailed how individual partners disposed of 74,198 shares of their stock through Dominick & Dominick.

Morgan Clashes Recalled.

It was when Christie, hard pressed by Pecora, sought advice of associates that Senator Glass and Pecora renewed heated interchanges reminiscent of those that marked the J. P. Morgan & Co. inquiry last spring.

Pecora told Christie he wanted information based on his own knowledge.

"You don't hesitate to consult your associates, and the witness has a right to consult his," Senator Glass broke in.

"The situation isn't analagous," Pecora shot back.

As Christie began to answer, Glass advised him:

"Get all of the information from your associates you want; I insist upon that."

Glass Wants Information.

The second clash came when Pecora hinted existence of a pool in the United States & Foreign Securities Corp. stock. Pointing to a Senate resolution requiring counsel to advise the committee on the line of questioning he will take, Glass complained he did not know what Pecora was trying to prove.

Chairman Fletcher (Democrat), Florida, said Pecora outlined his plans at an executive committee

Arms Action To Be Hurried

Rumors of Parley Failure Stirs U. S. and Other Delegations.

Geneva, Oct. 4 (AP).—The steering committee of the world disarmament conference was officially called today by Arthur Henderson, chairman of the assemblage, to meet in private session Monday afternoon.

It was understood that several delegations, including the American, had forced this action in view of persistent rumors that attempts would be made to declare the Geneva parley a potential failure.

A delegation of one of the great powers said tonight disarmament was hovering on the rocks. Belief was based on the fact that Germany and the other great powers, including the United States, had not reached a common understanding.

A German spokesman said the Reich would reveal its position when the conference resumes October 14 to consider the British disarmament plan.

Members of some delegations said they felt it useless to resume the conference unless a political settlement was reached.

'Pig-Killing, Milk-Dumping' Program Assailed by Long

New Orleans, La., Oct. 4 (U.P.). Senator Huey P. Long today got his long-awaited chance to speak his mind about the patronage business in Louisiana, and the "hog-murdering, milk-dumping, cotton-killing" program of the administration in Washington.

It was a telegram to Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board.

Wagner informed Long President Roosevelt had ordered the National Labor Board to set up arbitration and mediation boards in every State. He asked Senator Long to suggest names of New Orleans men for appointment.

This was the last straw for Huey. He sat down and framed his reply.

The Kingfish refused to make recommendations because "President Roosevelt had used all the recommendations that I have ever made in the past for purpose of giving out publicity of how I have been given a back seat through his administration." He said:

"If I submitted any names, it would most certainly follow that something would be said in the papers that I had undertaken to put myself in line with the outlandish performances of the administration out in this part of the country.

"Murdering hogs, pouring milk in the river, plowing up cotton, when people are crying for food and clothes, is something my mind can not comprehend anyway, so I just must be constitutionally unable to play the part required of me," Long said.

Secretary Addresses Labor Parley

Miss Perkins Backs Labor's Wage Demands

Her Promise to Help Fight Battles Wins Leaders Who Opposed Her.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins yesterday threw her support behind the fight of organized labor to obtain shorter hours and higher wages than those in existing NRA codes.

"We can not stop with the present minimum wages and maximum hours of labor," Miss Perkins said in a speech to the 577 delegates to the American Federation of Labor convention at the Willard Hotel.

"We must go on with a unified purpose to an ever-improving standard of living and assurance of economic security for all our people and sufficient leisure to enable us to enjoy the blessings which our resources and our equipment can make available to all of us," she added.

Workers Must Prosper.

There can be no prosperity without a prosperous working class, she said, adding that the workers can not be prosperous unless "industry recognizes that workers must receive increased wages and shorter hours in fair proportion as profits increase."

The response of the A. F. of L. to the speech of a woman, whose appointment to the Cabinet it had opposed, was startling. Delegates gave her an ovation.

President John L. Lewis, of the United Mine Workers, declared the speech was "inspirational," that it made her an ally of the organization in its fight for more fruits of the NRA program.

President William Green, of the federation, who led opposition to her appointment, asserted "we are heartened and inspired by her noble address."

"I want to assure her with all the sincerity at my command," he added, "that this great American labor movement will give her full and unreserved support. And if she gets into a fight with anyone who tries to hamper her work, let her call upon us, and we shall send millions to aid her."

Denounces Works Delay.

Prior to the speech, in which she aligned herself with the labor program, there had been excitement when eight national and international unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. had joined in denouncing the manner in which the $3,300,000,000 public works program has been administered.

Public Works Administrator Ickes has said those to blame for the drag of public works expenditures are State and local authorities. However, the eight unions asked the convention to press President Roosevelt to remove public officials who,

American Faces 7 Years, 15 Lashes

Canada Sentences Man for Bank Robbery.

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 4 (AP).—A seven-year sentence, with 15 lashes, was meted out today to Marion Fauria, arrested in Florida, charged with robbing the Royal Bank of Canada last November.

"Let this be a warning to American gunmen they can not come over to Canada," the judge said, in passing sentence.

Approximately $2,050 was obtained in the hold-up.

Fauria was charged with attempting to break jail while awaiting trial. He was given seven years for the robbery and an additional six months, beside the lashes, for the attempted jail break.

District Relief Head Will Ask For $750,000

Growing Needs to Require More Cash by March; 17,000 on Rolls.

Approximately $750,000 will be needed to meet growing demands of Washington needy when funds now available are exhausted in March, Lerony A. Halbert, District Emergency Relief Division director, divulged yesterday.

Halbert predicted Congress would be asked to set aside $500,000 from District funds for the work in a deficiency bill. He said it is likely the Federal Emergency Relief Administration would be asked to appropriate the additional $250,000.

About 17,000 persons, a majority of them unemployed, Halbert said, are on local relief rolls. The cost of caring for them has been approximating $80,000 a week. Slightly more than a third of all funds spent this year have been received from Federal sources and the remainder from the District.

Hard to Estimate Needs.

"It is hard, of course," Halbert explained, "to estimate our needs for the future. Much depends on economic conditions. We always have a seasonal increase in calls for help in the winter, but that may be offset by better times.

"We had to get two deficiency appropriations last year. All indications are we will have to get at least one this winter, because we can't let anyone starve."

Halbert announced the first shipment of 190,000 pounds of pork alloted to the District by the Federal Government is due next week. Consisting of 50,000 pounds, the meat will be distributed by trucks from the abandoned fire station house of Truck Co. No. 3 on Fourteenth street.

The pork will be shared by 10,000 families, each receiving five pounds. Halbert expects the first shipment will be exhausted in two weeks. Other meat will be requested as needed. Persons who have religious scruples against eating pork will receive orders for other food.

Chest Policy Changed.

Meanwhile, a radical change in Community Chest policy was indicated by Elwood Street, Chest director, who said his organization, in its drive for funds, will concentrate on caring for the financial needs of welfare, charitable and character building organizations instead of those interested in unemployment relief.

Street disclosed the goal in the November drive probably would be around $1,950,000.

Halbert said $1,300,000 in District funds for the fiscal year beginning July 1, last, and large Federal grants, originally expected to last until next July, are getting low. He said Federal grants for January, February and March totaled $140,767; for April, May and June, $173,353, and for July, August and September, tentative, $250,926.

President Starts Washington Trip

Jersey City, N. J., Oct. 5 (Thursday) (AP).—President Roosevelt left on a special train for Washington shortly after midnight today.

The President's party was joined by Henry Bruere, New York banker, who is expected to become the coordinator of Mr. Roosevelt's rapidly formulating credit expansion program.

Passing across Manhattan, the President's car encountered the after-theater crowds on Times Square and lusty cheers rose.

Carriers to Need Total of 1,089,746 Tons, Eastman Told.

(Associated Press.)

The administration yesterday asked four steel companies to submit bids on 844,525 tons of steel rails for 47 railroads.

Later, bids will be asked of a large number of companies on 245,221 tons of steel fastenings for rails after they are laid.

The railroads informed Joseph B. Eastman, coordinator of transportation, they would need a total of 1,089,746 tons of steel. The administration plan is to lend the carriers $25,000,000 or more from public works funds with which to make the purchases.

Steel Code Suspended.

To carry out the plan, which would supply work for men in steel mills and on the railroads, the steel code was suspended so the companies might compete. After the bids are in they will be made public, and the lowest will be taken as the base price at which the steel will be purchased. The bids are for rails of 60 pounds per yard or over.

The Pennsylvania Railroad, which needs 100,000 tons of rails and 30,000 tons of fastenings, told the coordinator it will place its own orders and did not ask a price reduction. Some railroads are seeking a reduction from the present base price of $40 a ton, while others contemplating important orders stipulated the price shall not exceed $35 a ton.

Needs of the carriers were made known today when Eastman gave out a letter he wrote to Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation; L. E. Block, chairman of the Inland Steel Co., and Arthur Roeder, receiver for the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co.

These four steel concerns are the only ones manufacturing rails of 60 pounds per yard or over. The most important bids will be on rails of 112 and 131 pound weights.

Wait on Fastenings.

"At the present time," Eastman wrote the steel men, "I am not asking for prices on fastenings, because it is my understanding that whereas only the four companies

German Press Gag Approved

Editors Will Be Subject to Discipline by Court.

(Copyright, 1933, by the United Press.)

Berlin, Oct. 4 (U.P.).—The cabinet tonight approved the first section of the press law submitted by Propaganda Minister Goebbels.

The press law affects all editors. It states that the press is "a public institution." Thus, the law is the exact opposite of the former conception of the absolute freedom of the press.

The law in many ways resembles the Italian Fascist press law. It provides for registration of all newspapermen, aiming at their supervision.

It stipulates that editors must be of Aryan descent (non-Jewish). All editors must share in the Nazi conception of the present state.

It is provided that editors must be German citizens.

Editors are far more responsible to the state authorities than heretofore. Their responsibility is defined as equal to that of civil servants, and they may be liable to disciplinary action by a press court—to be created—which may decide on an editor's absolute exclusion from the profession.

Four Killed During Looting In Hurricane-Swept Havana

Havana, Oct. 4 (AP).—Four persons met death tonight as looting broke out along the water front section of uptown Havana during the height of the second phase of a tropical storm which lashed over the city.

There was wild firing when soldiers, sailors and members of the Caribbean army sought to disperse groups of hoodlums. A soldier was fatally wounded, a sailor and two Negroes were killed.

Assembling of groups was forbidden. Army headquarters announced all available soldiers and sailors had been posted in the center of the city under strict orders to kill looters and suspicious-looking persons.

National Observatory predicted gales would sweep Havana throughout the night. Belen Observatory reported a maximum wind velocity of 82 miles.

Those wounded during the street fighting were taken to an emergency hospital which, like much of the rest of the city, was without light. Physicians were unable to operate immediately.

Roosevelt Asks Sterner Battle To Feed Needy

Welcomes Roosevelt

Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, who slapped the President on the back as he crossed the platform to make an address at the banquet of the Catholic Charities in New York last night.

"Harder Part Ahead," He Informs Catholic Charity Parley.

Greeted by Smith With Slap on Back

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Before the National Conference of Catholic Charities, President Roosevelt tonight praised the Nation for its relief efforts and called State, city, church and private institutions to redouble efforts for the "harder part ahead."

The President, who received a cheering reception was applauded heartily by the crowd in the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel as he asserted:

"We have ventured and we have won; we shall venture further and we shall win again."

Mr. Roosevelt was surrounded on the platform by high church dignitaries and prominent men of New York City including Alfred E. Smith and Mayor John P. O'Brien.

Greeted By Smith.

Mr. Smith slapped the President on his shoulder as the latter passed him walking to his seat. Smiling, Mr. Roosevelt whispered in Smith's ear as he passed.

The President was interrupted with lusty applause as he remarked:

"Leadership I have tried to give, but the great and most important fact has been the response—the wholehearted response—of America."

Cardinal Hayes, who sat beside the President, made a brief address.

President at Banquet.

The President and his party entered the hall nearly two hours before he delivered his address.

Mr. Roosevelt was escorted by his military aid, Col. Edwin Watson. On the arm of Cardinal Hayes was Mrs. Roosevelt. The cardinal, in robes of rich red, sat between them at the banquet.

As the party neared the dais, Mr. Smith—a portly figure with a large cigar—stepped forward.

"How are you, Frank?"

"Fine, Al," the President returned a slap on the shoulder.

The banquet provided a study in New York politics. In the center was the President, who has declared, a White House announcement recently said, a "hands off" policy in the mayoralty election. Nearby were Mayor O'Brien and John F. Curry, Tammany leader.

Farley Among Guests.

To the President's left was Postmaster General Farley who, it has been reported, lends his influence to the campagin of Joseph McKee, as an independent, over O'Brien. Further on was Smith.

But tonight, as the President appealed to churches and communities to give full share in the burden of jobless relief, politics was forgotten.

This was the last night of his final summer outing. After the banquet, he returned to Washington for the NRA's winter drive.

The expected discussion on currency was not forthcoming. Instead, the President stressed the spiritual side of the National life.

A long roar swelled over the banquet hall as he declared:

"Always have I been certain that we would conquer, because the spirit of America springs from faith—faith in the beloved institutions of our land and a true and abiding faith in the divine guidance of God."

Cardinal Hits Selfishness.

Cardinal Hayes, like the President, said the country must be reconstructed on a new basis. The old order, he said, was "built upon a foundation of selfishness, unrestricted competition, and a craving for economic power."

"Our able bodied citizens should be assured of a family wage," he continued, "decent hours, safe working conditions and steady work. No one can assert that they are beyond the resources of the land if properly managed.

"The days that face us are days of uncertainty, of change, but, nevertheless, days of hope."

Bonus Move Apparently Suppressed by Action of Committee.

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—The American Legion had before it tonight a plan of veterans' relief that concentrated on "full benefits" for the disabled and disregarded demands for immediate payment of the bonus.

The bonus matter was disposed of with apparent finality when a legislative committee turned down resolutions from six States — Illinois, Missouri, South Dakota, Texas, Michigan and Pennsylvania — urging immediate payment.

Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), Texas, leader in the movement, appeared satisfied to drop the matter after the committee adopted a resolution urging cancellation of interest on loans already made by veterans against their adjusted compensation certificates.

Five-Point Plan Ready.

Passed unanimously by the Legion's rehabilitation committee, a five-point program for aiding ex-service men will be placed before the convention tomorrow.

Except for declaring every former service man entitled to Federal hospitalization at any time and for any cause, the program deals only with those veterans whose ailments date back to injuries suffered or diseases contracted during actual military service.

No provision is made for compensation payments to veterans beset by illness, injuries or economic troubles since the end of the war. Free hospitalization would be the only Government grant to them.

Restore All Benefits.

However, for those wounded, injured or diseased in military service, the plan would restore all benefits removed or reduced under the economy act of last March, which trimmed $300,000,000 a year from such payments. Widows and orphans likewise would be provided for as they were prior to the economy act.

The legionnaires today adopted a child welfare program, selected Miami, Fla., for the 1934 convention and adopted more rigid regulations forbidding legion officials to take part in politics.

Schwab Quits Hospital Recovered After Rest

A. J. Gertenback, resident manager, said Schwab apparently was fully recovered from exhaustion.

Britons Confer On Debt Today With Acheson

British and American Treasury authorities today will begin discussions of the British war debt at the Treasury.

The British representative, Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, economic adviser to the British government, and T. K. Bewley, British treasury expert, it was indicated, have brought no specific proposal with them. They intend to explore the entire matter with Undersecretary of the Treasury Dean Acheson and Dr Frederick Livesy, economic adviser to the State Department, who have been assigned to represent this Government.

Up to last night, Mr. Acheson was without instruction from the President, and faced the opening of discussions, guided only by his general knowledge of the boundaries of the problem.

Added to these were the limitations imposed upon the Executive branch by the fact that whatever proposal, if any, emerges from the conversations must be submitted to Congress.

Lump Payment Doubted.

Assumptions that the British spokesmen bring with them a plan for a lump sum payment of about 10 per cent of the principal of the remaining debt, in other words, an offer to pay in the neighborhood of $400,000,000, are believed in official circles to be not justified by instructions under which the British representatives came here.

They are to report back to London for further instructions if discussions reach the point of this or any similar proposal.

In attempting to forecast the outcome of the renewed conversations, which begin at 10 o'clock in Mr. Acheson's office, about the only indicator is the Treasury's unconcealed dubiousness about achieving important results at this time.

Those best qualified to judge believe the most that can be expected is another formula for getting past the December 15 installments, amounting to $117,670,765.

Stabilization Doubted.

That so-called stabilization will inevitably enter the discussions is another assumption on the outside, but neither the British nor the Americans, it is believed, are prepared to raise that crucial subject.

Leith-Ross, accompanied by Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, paid a formal call upon Secretary of State Hull yesterday afternoon. The Ambassador subsequently remarked that the British views on the debts would be presented "very gradually indeed."

Dillon Bank Pool Profits Revealed

meeting Tuesday not attended by Glass.

"I was responsible for my own attendance at that meeting, and for nobody else's," Pecora said.

"Unfortunately I wasn't able to be there," put in Glass.

"I hope the Senator doesn't hold me responsible for that," said Pecora.

Couzens Cites Ethics.

Senator Couzens (Republican), Michigan, questioned the "ethics" of an arrangement through which Dillon, Read & Co. partners permitted another firm to trade for profit in private shares of their own company's investment trust.

He asked Christie if the Investment Bankers Association, which shortly will install him as president, "approves of such practices?"

"When I head the association," Christie replied, "I will not sponsor any policy you or your committee considers unethical."

Senator Glass voiced vigorous opposition to the operation of pools. He said he "would like to break them all up, if they would let me." But he added testimony before the committee was just "useless hammering, that will not do any good."

Pecora asked Christie if he agreed with the Virginian's statement that pool operations constitute "gambling" as opposed to investments?"

"I suppose so," Christie said.

Pecora charged options through which individual Dillon, Read & Co. partners agreed to let Dominick & Dominick trade in their stock operated to "dam up normal operations and interfere with the law of supply and demand." The witness did not dispute it.

Two Options Given.

Christie testified Dominick & Dominick were given two separate "options" on the investment trust's private shares. Under the first, negotiated independently with the partners themselves, 25,000 shares were acquired. The second, negotiated with partners in the firm's name, involved sale of 49,198 shares.

Over and above these options, Dillon, Read & Co. partners entered the open market and sold about 46,000 additional shares as high as $56 a share, Pecora charged. He said all of these operations, involving 120,552 shares, netted firm members $6,843,380 for stock originally issued at $24,110.

Christie said he personally participated in this sale of private stock and canvassed other members of the firm. Ten or 11 decided to come in, and about seven or eight elected not to, he said. Although most of this stock was first acquired by officials at 20 cents a share, Christie said his own, purchased in the market, cost him $10 a share.

The committee will turn attention today to seven South American bond issues floated by Dillon, Read & Co., including Bolivian and Brazilian issues.

Social Justice Increasing All Over World, He Says at Catholic Charity Conference; Calls for Self-Sacrifice to Aid Needy.

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—The text of the address delivered tonight by President Roosevelt to the National Conference of Catholic Charities follows:

In the midst of problems of material things—in the machine age of invention, of finance, of international suspicion and renewed armament—every one of us must gain satisfaction and strength in the knowledge that social justice is becoming an ever-growing factor and influence in almost every part of the world.

With every passing year I become more confident that humanity is moving forward to the practical application of the teachings of Christianity as they affect the individual lives of men and women.

It is fitting that this annual National Conference of Catholic Charities should celebrate also the centennial of the Society of St. Vincent de Paul. I like to remember the taunt of atheists and enemies of the Christian religion in the Paris of 1833, when they demanded of the churches, "show us your works." I like to think of the acceptance of that challenge and the decision to show that Christianity was not dead, and that the deeds of Christians were in accordance with their faith.

Praises Aid of Churches In War on Suffering.

When I realize that this one society, last year, in its task of visitation and relief of the poor in their own homes, in hospitals and institutions, aided more than 150,000 families; and that other great organizations of men and women, connected with all the churches in all the land, are working with similar unselfishness for the alleviation of human suffering and the righting of human wrong, I am confirmed in my deep belief that God is marching on.

Seven months ago this very day, standing at the portals of the Capitol at Washington, about to assume the responsibilities of the Presidency, I told the people of America that we were going to face facts, no matter how hard or difficult those facts might be, and that it was my firm belief that the only thing we had to fear was fear itself.

I believed then—and I know now—that our people would support definite action that sought the goal of giving every man his due. Leadership, I have tried to give; but the great and most important fact has been the response—the whole-hearted response—of America. We have recaptured and rekindled our pioneering spirit. We have insisted that this shall always be a spirit of justice, a spirit of teamwork, a spirit of sacrifice, and, above all, a spirit of neighborliness.

Individual Sacrifices Held Vital for Revival.

We have sought to adjust the processes of industrial and agricultural life, and in so doing we have sought to view the picture as a whole. Revival of industry, redemption of agriculture, reconstruction of banking, development of public works, the lifting of crushing debt—all these in every part of the Nation call for a willingness to sacrifice individual gains, to work together for the public welfare and for the success of a broad national program of recovery.

We have to have courage and discipline and vision to blaze the new trails in life; but underlying all our efforts is the conviction that men can not live unto themselves alone. A democracy must be bound together by the ties of neighborliness.

That tie has been the guiding spirit of your work for the sick, for the children in need and for the aged and friendless. And you who have participated in the actual day-to-day work of practical and useful charity understand well that no program of recovery can suddenly restore all our people to self-support.

This is the time when you and I know that, though we have proceeded a portion of the way, the longer, harder part still lies ahead; and that it is for us to redouble our efforts to care for those who must still depend upon relief, to prevent the disintegration of home life, and to stand by the victims of the depression until it is definitely past.

Relief Tasks Held Duty of Communities.

The Federal Government has inaugurated new measures of relief on a vast scale, but the Federal Government can not, and does not intend, to take over the whole job. Many times I have insisted that every community and every State must first do their share.

Out of this picture we are developing a new science of social treatment and rehabilitation—working it out through an unselfish partnership between all church and private social service agencies with the agencies of Government itself.

From the point of view of the fixing of responsibilities, the prevention of overlapping and of waste and the coordination of efforts, we are making enormous strides with every passing day. But back of the cooperative leadership which is showing itself in every part of the country there are two other vital reasons for the maintenance of the efforts of the churches and other nongovernmental groups.

he first of these is that much as we strive for the broad principles of social justice, the actual application of these principles is, of necessity, an individual thing—a thing which touches individual lives and individual families.

No governmental organzation in all history has been able to keep the human touch to the same extent as church and private effort. Government can do many things better than private associations or citizens, but in the last analysis success in personal matters depends on the personal contact between neighbor and neighbor.

Spiritual Values Hailed as Outstanding.

The other reason in the fact that the people of the United States still recognize, and, I believe, recognize with firmer faith than ever before, that spiritual values count in the long run more than material values.

Those who have sought by edict to eliminate the right of mankind to believe in God and to practice that belief, have, in every case, discovered sooner or later that they are tilting in vain against an inherent, essential, undying quality, and indeed necessity, of the human race—a quality and a necessity which in every century have proved an essential to permanent progress.

Clear thinking and earnest effort and sincere faith will result in thoroughgoing support throughout the whole Nation for efforts such as yours. The spirit of our people has not been daunted. It has come through the trials of these days unafraid. We have ventured and we have won; we shall venture further and we shall win.

The traditions of a great people have been enriched. In our measure of recovery and of relief we have preserved all that is best in our history and are building thereon a new structure—strong and firm and permanent.

I can never express in words what the loyalty and trust of the Nation have meant to me. Not for a moment have I doubted that we would climb out of the valley of gloom. Always have I been certain that we would conquer, because the spirit of America springs from faith—faith in the beloved institutions of our land, and a true and abiding faith in the divine guidance of God.

Missing Books Mystery Bared In Ship Probe

Evidence of mysterious disappearance of books of the Empire Stevedoring Co., subsidiary of the Black Diamond Steamship Lines, when a Senate investigator wished to inspect them, was given at yesterday's hearing before the special Senate committee investigating ocean mail contracts.

Questioned by Senator Black (Democrat), Alabama, chairman of the committee, J. E. Dockendorff, president of the company, said that when he was asked by the investigator for the books three weeks ago he found all the bookkeeping records of the company for the period 1920-30 were gone from the warehouse where they were stored.

"Have you lost any other records of any of your companies?" asked Chairman Black.

"No," he replied.

$2,000,000 Traced.

Senator Black had sought to learn the source of $2,000,000 Dockendorff said he put into the Black Diamond Steamship Lines during the time he operated them for the Shipping Board.

Dockendorff, president of Dockendorff & Co. and the Empire Stevedoring Co., in addition to the steamship lines, said the stevedoring company was the only one of his businesses that made any money in 1920-30.

"Isn't it true this money came from the Government for stevedoring operations for the Shipping Board vessels?" asked Senator Black.

"Not all of it. We also had transactions besides those for the Government," he replied.

He further said no regular line used his stevedoring company, but occasional boats assigned from the Shipping Board.

"The company received $150,000 to $180,000 in addition to the $280,000 already reported in profits to the Comptroller General," added Dockendorff.

Can Not Recall Salary.

Black, reading from the Dockendorff files, asked the witness whether he had personally drawn an average of $100,000 a year for salaries, expenses and entertainments in connection with the three firms. Dockendorff replied he could not remember.

The witness said he had given nothing to the 1928 Republican campaign funds, although he had contributed $2,000 to the senatorial campaign of Bert Haney, formerly on the Shipping Board.

From correspondence between Dockendorff and R. E. Dougherty, vice president of the New York Central, it was revealed Postmaster General Farley had been asked about possible new members of the Shipping Board. One letter quoted Farley as having said the question was entirely up to President Roosevelt, and Dockendorff wondered whether "they intend to get rid of our friend."

Identified as O'Connor.

This friend Dockendorff identified as T. V. O'Connor, chairman of the board.

Further correspondence was placed in the record revealing Dockendorff and his associates sought to have J. Caldwell Jenkins made president of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, of which he at that time was vice president. Jenkins is now vice president of the Black Diamond lines.

"We did all we could to help Mr. Jenkins," Dockendorff replied to Senator Black's questions. "He is a very fair and honest man."

Quarrels Led To Resignation, States Malloy

Charges Attorney General Refused to Prosecute N. Y. Financier.

(Associated Press.)

Pat Malloy, of Oklahoma, told newspapermen last night that a series of differences with Attorney General Cummings caused his resignation as Assistant Attorney General.

He said his recommendation for prosecution of a New York financier on income tax evasion charges had been rejected.

Another factor, he said, was the disavowal by the Attorney General of a speech before the American Bar Association in which Malloy suggested a Federal Police.

Malloy exhibited a letter signed "William Stanley" in an attempt to show his bar association speech had had the Attorney General's approval in advance. Stanley is an Assistant Attorney General.

His letter, dated August 26, read: "Dear Pat: I have discussed with the Attorney General your suggested discussion on the report of the criminal section of the ABA, which we think is all right.

"Of course, the Attorney General has tried to impress on everyone that the campaign against racketeering must necessarily be slow and the public must not expect quick results."

Malloy said that one occasion he refused to prosecute a minor official charged with a defalcation of $2,000.

Malloy said he gave the explanation that "the evidence is not strong and I refuse to use the Government to prosecute a little man and let a big man go free."

He asserted he would "challenge him (Cummings) to prosecute the big fellow now."

Malloy, whose resignation was accepted yesterday, effective October 5, said he had no immediate plans.

Gen. Clem Conducts Society of Cumberland

Columbus, Ohio, Oct. 4 (AP).—The war in the 60's was the topic of the Society of the Army of the Cumberland today as it opened its sixty-eighth convention.

Miss Perkins Wins Support of Labor

"through laxity or inefficiency" in the handling of public works funds, are responsible for unemployment of many workers who are "suffering and in want."

The Perkins speech, however, swept this and all else before it.

Spurning a microphone, she turned to the delegates and informed them in a voice which reached every corner of the immense hall, that she had not asked labor to follow any program of hers—that she is carrying out labor's program in a way to provide "justice to all."

The program, including shorter hours, higher wages, education, unemployment relief, public works and abolition of child labor, was agreed upon at a conference March 31.

"We naively said we hoped for action in four years, but we are making progress and only four months have passed," she said.

She did not ask the A. F. of L. to 'have faith in the NRA" as President Green had done. She said progress is being made and pleaded that labor cooperate with her so that its aims—higher wages, more leisure, better living conditions—might finally be realized.

After another speech in which Chairman William F. Stevenson explained the Home Loan Bank Board, the delegates were so pleased the women began preparing for a party in the hotel ballroom, while the men repaired to the Social Oyster Club, Twelfth street and Rhode Island avenue northeast, for a big time and ten barrels of beer.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, and Senator Wagner, New York Democratic chairman of President Roosevelt's National Labor Board, who were expected to speak, were not present, but President Green said they would appear "as soon as we can find time."

U. S. Asks Bids On Big Rail Order which I am now addressing or subsidiaries thereof, manufacture standard tee rails of more than 60 pounds per yard, rail fastenings are sold by numerous concerns.

"Inasmuch as there are some uncertainties with respect to the purchase of rails, it has seemed advisable to leave the matter of fastenings in abeyance until the rail question has been determined. Thereafter all concerns selling fastenings will be given opportunity to submit prices therefor."

Eastman said he understood the railroads were prepared to take early delivery except Southern Pacific, which will want part of its order in 1934; the Lackawanna, which will want 3,000 tons this year and 10,000 next; Western Maryland, which will want 2,000 tons in 1933 and 2,000 in 1934, and Northern Pacific, which wil want 5,000 tons in 1933 and 5,000 in 1934.

Hot Desert Wind Puts Los Angeles Mercury at 100

Los Angeles, Oct. 4 (AP).—Indian summer went on the warpath in southern California today, ushering in the hottest day of the year on the wings of a scorching desert wind.

At 11 a. m. the temperature touched 100 degrees in Los Angeles, four higher than the previous maximum for 1933 set on August 11. The heat wave follows one of the coolest Septembers in several years.

Reich Fire Aid Probe Pushed

Court Grills Incendiary in Attempt to Show Others Helped.

Leipzig, Germany, Oct. 4 (AP).—The Supreme Court continued today an attempt to learn whether Marinus Van Der Lubbe, confessed Reichstag incendiary, had assistance in firing the building last February, but met Stubborn Denials from the young Dutchman and his four fellow defendants.

Van Der Lubbe was questioned on reports of three investigators that "you alone" could not have started the fire, which broke out in a number of places.

Ernest Torgler, former Communist floor leader in the Reichstag, another defendant, denied having seen Van Der Lubbe or the three accused Bulgarians Georgi Dimitroff, Wassil Taneff and Blagoi Popoff—before the fire.

Van Der Lubbe, challenged by Dimitroff, said he had never seen Dimitroff, Taneff and Popoff before.

Judge Buenger confronted Torgler with a statement of three Nazis declaring they saw him walking with Van Der Lubbe the day of the fire, and sitting with Popoff in an antechamber.

Torgler said the men he had been seen with were Wilhelm Florin and Dr. Theodor Neubauer.

Life of Luxury Ends For Ella Wendel's Dog

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Too much of a good thing has done for Toby, the pet poodle of the late Ella von E. Wendel.

Toby, whose playground was an expensive piece of Fifth avenue real estate, set aside for its use by Miss Wendel's will, and whose bed was a silken pillow, had grown too fat, and showed a tendency to snap at the hands that fed it.

A veterinarian ended Toby's days, on orders of executors of Miss Wendel's multimillion-dollar estate, and the dog was buried in Irvington, N. Y., in accordance with Miss Wendel's wish that it lie "with his predecessors."

Britain Flays Nazis' Jew Ban Before League

Reich Refusal of Race Minority Doctrine Denounced.

Geneva, Oct. 4 (AP).—An indictment against the German conception of racial homogeneity in their aryan doctrine was voiced today by William G. A. Ormsby-Gore, British League of Nations delegate, as he challenged the Reich view of the Jewish question.

Members of the political committee of the league applauded him as he shook his finger at Dr. Von Keller, the German representative, and declared:

"Wherever Jews have been in the course of the centuries, they have been the most loyal and helpful members of the nations. There is among the Jews a sense of historic continuity. * * * We must regard German Jews, as well as Jews elsewhere, as definitely a racial minority."

Germany yesterday urged the Jewish question not be joined with the debate on minorities.

Ormsby-Gore declared that if Great Britain accepted the German doctrine of race ascendancy, the nation "would really be Scotch," and "I tremble to think of our responsibilities in respect to the citizens of the United States who claim descent from the Pilgrims of the Mayflower—three millions of them—if this idea is put into operation."

He flayed what he called the German thesis that a state has the right to concern itself with the citizens of its race living in another country, and gave one of the warmest defenses of the parliamentary system in an international gathering since the advent of Fascism and Hitlerism.

"Great Britain never will abandon parliamentarism."

A German delegate told the league economic commission, discussing a Dutch resolution seeking the creation of a special organization to find homes for Jewish refugees, that some Jews had left Germany because of "their bad consciences." He declined representation on a subcommittee to study the project.

Medieval Gold Crown Discovered in Denmark

Arkansas Man Who Called Family in Smithfield, Va. Praises Phone

Mr. A. R. Coleman of Little Rock, Ark., made a long distance call to his mother and father in Smithfield, Va., recently.

So pleased was he with the result that he wrote us this letter:

"I had been away from home over three months, so I decided to call them up. Priceless are the voices of those we love. Through Chicago, Philadelphia and finally to my mother and dad in Smithfield, Va., went my request—and I talked with them, heard their voices. Afterwards, reflecting on the call, one of the most marvelous things to me was this—that out of 120,000,000 people in this country (like a big crowd) you reached out and tapped just two on the shoulder for me, and then granted me the means of talking to them. Surely I rubbed Aladdin's lamp!"

Federal Relief To Ban Hunger Says Hopkins

6,000,000 Children to Be Fed, Plan of Surplus Agency Head.

The new Government agency to feed surpluses to the needy will be known as the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation, Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief administrator, announced last night. Hopkins, Secretary Wallace and Secretary Ickes will be directors.

Hopkins pledged the nonprofit corporation would see that no person in the Nation goes hungry.

At the same time, distribution of food to undernourished children in schools and eradication of malaria in the South were added to the program for aiding the destitute.

Daily Meal for Children.

Concerned over increasing malnutrition among children of the unemployed, Hopkins ordered local relief committees in the 48 States and the District of Columbia to see that children of families on relief rolls are given a meal daily at schools. Authorities also are to assure the children plenty of milk.

Approximately 6,000,000 children throughout the Nation will be affected.

The Southern malaria eradication program calls for placing men from unemployment relief lists on mosquito-control projects. States affected include Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Tennessee.

Method of Financing.

The corporation will buy foods, coal and clothing in its two-way program of consuming surpluses and caring for the needy. It will finance operations by processing and compensatory taxes plus Federal relief funds.

In many cases the corporation probably will want to buy products on which processing taxes can not logically be levied. These it will buy outright. Manufacturers probably will be asked to produce goods without profit for the corporation, Hopkins said.

Outlines Relief Needs.

A picture of increasing relief needs was outlined by Hopkins. The Federal Government, he said, is determined that suffering must stop, and will spend money to that end. Total relief expenditures for the Nation, including municipal, State and Federal, will average a billion dollars annually, he declared.

Details of the malaria eradication program will be worked out at conference of Southern relief directors at Richmond tomorrow.

Dollfuss Death Effort Probed

New Safeguards Devised for Chancellor; Nazis Defy Police.

Vienna, Oct. 4 (AP).—Police doubled efforts today to solve yesterday's attempt to kill Chancellor Dollfuss, while Karl Karwinsky, secretary for public security, worked out new arrangements for protection of the chancellor's life.

Scores of Nazis and others were arrested, but most of them were released.

The foreign office described as fantastic reports that the attempt of the former army bugler, Rudolf Dertil, was to have been the signal for a Nazi uprising in Styria.

Army Probes Death of Fliers In Tree Crash

Two Crushed in Wreckage Near Annapolis; Engine Trouble Blamed.

An Army board of inquiry assembled in the woods near Annapolis, Md., late yesterday to investigate the crash of a bombing plane, in which two Army fliers were killed a few hours earlier.

First Lieut. Richard C. W. Booker, 23, Air Corps Reserve, and Sergt. William Rhoads, 32, radio operator, lost their lives when the bimotored plane crashed into the top of a tree. Engine trouble was blamed.

The plane was making a routine flight from Langley Field, Va., to Middleton, Pa. Its distress was noted by Annapolis residents.

Eugene W. Clark, living between Defense and Crain highways, 12 miles northwest of Annapolis, said the plane flew extremely low as it approached his farm.

Plane Smashes Tree.

Little higher than the trees, it circled an open field in front of his house, Clark said. The motors were cut off with a loud explosion. A landing was attempted from the woods-bordered side of the field.

The top of a 60-foot oak was snapped off. The bomber careened and crashed in a nose dive, but did not take fire.

Clark attempted to drag the men from the wreckage. A line crew employed by a Baltimore electric company, directed by C. F. Payne, Annapolis, came to his aid and used a hand derrick to remove parts of the plane.

The West Annapolis Fire Department ambulance took the bodies to Fort George G. Meade Hospital, 8 miles away. Death was said to have been instantaneous.

Ships Warned Of Freak Gale, Florida Bound

Heavy Rain at Key West; Wind Reaches 70 Miles.

A freak tropical disturbance assuming hurricane proportions last night was proceeding in a northeastward direction south of the Florida Keys, according to the Washington Weather Bureau.

The blow was unusual in that its center remained practically stationary about six miles north of Havana for hours yesterday.

The S. S. Kingsland radioed the Bureau that the wind reached a velocity of 70 miles an hour.

The Weather Bureau announced that the storm would cause northeast to north gales possibly reaching hurricane force on the Florida Keys, with possible whole-gale force from Miami southward to the Florida Keys.

The storm was described as being "very abnormal" in its change of course and ships were warned to exercise extreme caution.

The bureau said 10½ inches of rain fell at Key West yesterday.

Since early August, 18 hurricanes have swept up out of the Caribbean either through the Yucatan Channel into Mexico or Texas, or up from direction of the Windward Islands, east of Cuba and along the North American coatsline.

The previous yearly record was established in 1870, when 16 storms were reported.

Gale Lashes Havana.

Miami, Fla., Oct. 4 (AP). — Having lashed Havana with 80-mile winds, a tropical hurricane moved slowly toward the Gulf of Mexico tonight.

Richard W. Gray, Government meteorologist here, said the storm had slowed almost to a standstill at a point approximately 7 miles southwest of Key West.

A wireless message was received indicating an unidentified airplane pilot may have fallen into heavy seas while enroute from West End, Bahamas, to Fort Pierce, Fla.

14,000 Hired In River Work

Army Engineers' Projects Already Under Way Total $9,110,000.

Total of 14,000 men have been employed, work started on projects totaling $9,110,000 and contracts for an additional $33,300,000 have been let by Army engineers participating in the public works program, it was announced yesterday at the War Department.

Stressing speed of engineers in putting part of their program into actual construction stage, War Department officials said contracts for an additional $84,700,000 are under advertisement. Most of the work is in connection with river and harbor and flood-control improvements.

The first warrant for work to be supervised by engineers was received August 30. It was for $7,000,000 for resumption of hired labor bank revetment and levee work on the lower Mississippi flood-control project. Within a week more than 3,000 men were at work, and now more than 8,000 men are employed on this project alone.

Another large allotment was $70,000,000 to be distributed among 90 major river and harbor projects. Work is under way in the Mississippi region, on the Missouri River, on the Winooski River in Vermont, on the Rio Grande, the Savannah River in Georgia, the Columbia River in Oregon and at other points.

Plane Pilots' Strike Averted By Sen. Wagner

National Labor Board's Head to Arbitrate Pay Dispute.

The threatened strike of airline pilots of the six principal companies was averted yesterday by Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, chairman of the National Labor Board, in its first really important wage arbitration.

Approximately 650 pilots flying commercial planes, most of which carry passengers and express, as well as mail, had threatened to leave their planes grounded at midnight last night unless the operators canceled a new wage scale effective October 1, which, the pilots held, reduced their pay.

At the conclusion of a hearing late yesterday at the National Labor Board's offices, Senator Wagner announced his board soon will appoint a fact-finding committee to study the differences between airline operators and pilots. This committee will be composed of one pilots' representative, one for the operators, and a third, "impartial" member.

Decision in 3 Weeks.

"The committee will report its findings in three weeks to the National Labor Board," Senator Wagner said. "Then a final decision will be conducted on the whole question, after which a decision will be given that will be binding and effective as of October 1. I am glad to say that there will be no strike.

Government officials were interested in the strike settlement as a walkout meant delays in carrying important mail.

No Temporary Ruling.

Senator Wagner did not reveal that the former wages of the pilots would be restored pending the decision to follow the final hearing. He said, however, the findings will be retroactive to October 1, and if the decision is reached to enforce payment of the former wage scale, the pilots would receive the difference in pay.

1 Killed, 2 Hurt Disorder Toll In Strike Zones

(Associated Press.)

One man was dead, two were critically hurt and State troops were watching the situation anxiously yesterday as strike disorders continued in many sections of the country.

At Sullivan, Ind., where coal miners were on strike, a man was killed by an automobile driven through a crowd of pickets.

Two men were critically wounded and several others clubbed when 300 pickets and 100 steel workers clashed outside a plant at Ambridge, Pa.

More than two-thirds of the district's 75,000 striking soft coal miners refused to go back to work despite pleas of the Federal Government and commands of their National leaders.

Terror in Illinois.

Picket lines formed at nearly all mines and pickets marched monotonously in front of other steel plants—notably the Clairton works of the Carnegie Steel Co. and at the Weirton Steel Co.'s Weirton and Clarksburg, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio, operations. At Steubenville a barrage of tear gas bombs quelled a disturbance yesterday.

Saline County in Illinois, the focal point in the fight between the Progressive Miners Union and the United Mine Workers for control of the coal fields, was in a state of terror as a result of bombings and shootings. Members of the Lawrenceville, Ill., company of the National Guard, were notified to be ready for a call to duty at Harrisburg.

Gov. Horner invited representatives of both unions, two operators' associations and the Federal Government to meet at Springfield today.

$3,000,000 Loss.

Striking tool and diemakers in Detroit, Flint and Pontiac, Mich., were told by C. C. Richard, Detroit manufacturer, that Detroit jobbers had lost $3,000,000 worth of business in 10 days because of their walkout.

At Edgewater, N. J., two men were arrested when disorders broke out at the Ford assembly plant, where more than 1,000 employes are on strike. No one was injured seriously.

Strikers there said they planned to join strikers from Chester, Pa., at the Ford plant to parade through New York streets and then stage a motorcade advance to Detroit.

Under NRA mediation a strike of flour truckmen and helpers was settled in New York and the men went back to work on a 5-day week of 48 hours.

Bodies of 26 Hollywood Fire Victims Found

Incendiarism Suspect Is Held; Identification of Dead Slow.

Los Angeles, Oct. 4 (AP).—Twenty-six bodies had been recovered late today from the ruins of a disastrous forest fire in Griffith Park, the city's main playground, a twenty-seventh victim died in a hospital, and fire officials expressed belief no others had perished, saying "nearly every foot" of the burned area had been searched.

Those who perished were R. F. C. unemployment relief workers on park roads, called late yesterday to fight a small blaze.

Most of the known dead and the more than 125 injured were trapped in a boxlike canyon. The wind shifted and sent the flames toward them. Scenes of horror followed as they struggled to escape. More than 1,000 acres of park land were burned over.

Suspect Arrested.

Fire and police officials at first attributed the fire to a cigarette or match. Later, Hollywood detectives arrested Robert D. Barr, 29, for questioning after he had been found, they said, near the scene of some small new blazes started early today.

Officers said Barr admitted he started a fire in Griffith Park at 10 o'clock last night, but denied having been responsible for the main fire eight hours earlier.

Only a few of the victims had been identified today. Piteous scenes were enacted at the county morgues, which were besieged by families and relatives of those of the 3,784 park workers unaccounted for.

Inquest Next Week.

While the mayor and district attorney started official investigations, Coroner Frank Nance announced that an inquest will be held next Wednesday.

Fire Chief Ralph J. Scott blamed the tragedy on the fact that men inexperienced with forest fires were sent to quell the park blaze.

C. E. Thompson Donor of Air Trophy, Dies

Manufacturer Taken Ill Here on Trip to Talk With Johnson.

Charles E. Thompson, 63, pioneer Cleveland automotive parts manufacturer and donor of the Thompson Air Trophy, died yesterday in Emergency Hospital. He came here last week to confer with Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson regarding metal trades codes.

Thompson was seized with an attack of acute indigestion shortly after his arrival. A relapse occurred yesterday, and he died at 6 p. m.

Founder of the Thompson Aeronautical Parts Co., now the Trans-American Co., Thompson was one of the leaders in developing speed in American aviation. He spent large sums encouraging construction and use of airplanes.

He was president of the Thompson Products Co., manufacturers of pistons and engine parts.

Former Senator Hiram Bingham, president of the National Aeronautic Association, said:

"A far-sighted patron of aviation, devoted to the best interests of racing pilots and always anxious to see America first in the air, has passed. He was a keen lover of good sport."

He is survived by his widow and six children, Edwin G., Thomas, Howard H., Kenneth, Larene and Mrs. Phillip Farley of New York.

The body probably will be taken to Cleveland today. Funeral arrangements had not been completed last night.

Urschel Case 'Master Mind' Believed Memphis Attorney

Officials Check Evidence Said to Link Kelly's Brother-in-Law.

Oklahoma City, Oct. 4 (AP).—Announcement here today that George (Machine Gun) Kelly will plead guilty to the Government's charge that he kidnaped Charles F. Urschel, wealthy oil man, was followed by word from Denver that Federal authorities had information they believed would reveal an attorney as the "master mind" in the abduction plot.

John V. Roberts, Enid attorney, after a conference with Kathryn Kelly, the former bootlegger's wife, said she would plead not guilty, but that Kelly would plead guilty, appearing as a witness in his wife's behalf.

Mrs. Kelly's father, J. E. Brooks, said he will aid financially in the defense of his daughter. Mrs. Kelly's mother, Mrs. Ora Shannon, and her stepfather, R. G. Shannon, are among seven persons convicted last week for the kidnap conspiracy.

Seeks $15,000 Reward.

Roberts quoted Mrs. Kelly as saying she would file suit to prevent the $15,000 reward, offered for capture of her and her husband, from being paid to "anyone else." This was interpreted as meaning she would claim the reward on the ground she planned to surrender before ocers surrounded the home of Kelly's brother-in-law in Memphis last week and captured the fugitive couple. Langdon Ramsey, the brother-in-law, also was taken into custody.

New evidence was being checked by Val Zimmer, Department of Justice agent at Denver, with Washington and Oklahoma City Federal authorities, which, they say, may identify Ramsey, a Memphis attorney, as the "master mind" in the Urschel abduction.

The true bill against the farmers set forth overt acts of conspiracy, including the changing of three $100 bills.

Believe Money Was Kelly's.

The Government alleges the buried money was Kelly's share of the ransom loot, which totaled $200,000.

Albert Bates, taken in Denver about the same time Harvey Bailey was captured on the Shannon farm near Paradise, Tex., asserts the person who took his share of the ransom money has been killed. Both Bates and Bailey were convicted last week in the Federal court trial.

Arraignment of the Kellys will precede the sentencing of the seven convicted persons, set for Saturday. Motions for new trials on behalf of those convicted will be completed before the week-end.

Calls Him Ideal Mask for Master of the Bronx.

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—The Fusion forces led by Fiorello H. LaGuardia and Samuel Seabury moved into the Bronx tonight and let go a blast in their campaign against Tammany and the Independent mayoralty candidate, Joseph V. McKee.

Seabury, speaking at a rally in the Hunts Point Palace, accused McKee of being "dominated by Edward J. Flynn, Bronx Democratic leader, just as Mayor John P. O'Brien was under control of Tammany Chief John F. Curry." He added:

"The Boss of the Bronx, Mr. Flynn, and the Boss of Manhattan, Mr. Curry, pursue the same methods and operate their county governments at a profit for themselves and their own political machines.

Curry Opposes Flynn.

"Flynn wants more of the spoils than Curry is willing that he should have, and Curry more of the spoils than Flynn is willing to let him have; therefore each has named his own agent, puppet or tool as candidate for mayor.

"Curry operates Mayor O'Brien—controls him in all respects; and Flynn expects the same measure of control and direction over Mr. McKee.

"The only difference between McKee and O'Brien is that Curry has to explain things to O'Brien, while McKee knows exactly what his master wants.

Statement by McKee.

"By electing Maj. LaGuardia, you will kill two birds with one stone. The vicious influence of both Curry and Flynn will be terminated."

Mc Kee, in a statement, declared he was completely independent, accountable to no one. His campaign, he said, was supported by the "same men and women who led the fight to elect Roosevelt and Lehman."

Maj. LaGuardia attacked the system of acquiring land for public buildings, declaring it has "degenerated into a racket" costing the taxpayers millions of dollars.

McKee tonight announced the names of his running mates. They are: For Comptroller, James I. Cuff, of Brooklyn, former Assistant District Attorney; for president of the Board of Aldermen, Nathan Straus, jr., former State senator.

NRA Presents Film Industry Revised Code

Drastic Changes Ordered in Substitute for First Proposal.

The National Recovery Administration yesterday gave the motion picture industry a code of fair competition drawn up by the NRA, containing a drastic revision of a code submitted several weeks ago by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors Association, and establishing a code authority to supervise adherence of those affected.

Make-up of the code authority was not prescribed, but its duties were defined. Code directors are authorized to make independent investigations of alleged code violations and to inspect books, contracts, documents and records.

The code gives all employes in production, distribution or exhibition of films, the right to organize and bargain collectively as authorized in section 7a of the national recovery act.

40-Hour Week.

No employe is to work more than 40 hours a week, and a maximum of 36 hours is provided for a class of 59 trades engaged in studio mechanics. The maximum hours do not apply to executives, professional persons, including actors (exclusive of "extras"), employes working on a production unit, on location work or newsreel production.

The code sets minimum wages of 40 cents an hour for the entire industry, 50 cents an hour for clerical help, and $1.16 to $1.94 an hour for mechanical departments.

Extra players may be cheered with a minimum of $7.50 a day, graded up to $15 a day, and even $25 daily, if the performer be required to play an essential part.

Child Labor Barred.

"Atmosphere people" and "crowds" would receive $5 a day minimum under certain provisions.

Employment of child labor under 16 years of age is prohibited, with the provision that age specifications in State laws shall be observed.

Chorus girls are given a minimum wage of $35 a week when traveling; $30 a week in any "de luxe" theater; $25 a week in other than "de luxe" theaters, when they are playing in motion picture houses.

The code provides no distributor shall "threaten or coerce or intimidate" any exhibitor into entering into a picture contract or to pay higher film rentals by the commission of any overt act tending to build or acquire a theater in competition with the exhibitor.

WHEN REPEAL GOES OVER

Will it stop the present orgy of drunkenness?

EVERY reputable liquor dealer recognizes drunkenness as the greatest enemy of his business.

The great majority of people believe that repeal will promote the cause of true temperance. No one will deny that, because of the difficulties of enforcement, there has been a great deal of intemperance.

On the other hand, many people believe that the country is at the crossroads and that it faces a critical situation. After fourteen years of prohibition, liquor will be legalized, and of course there will always be plenty of chances to drink to excess.

No one denies the folly of intemperance. How, then, can this vice be prevented? To stop the craving for alcohol before it gets a stranglehold is the real problem.

A Lesson from Ancient Egypt

The ancient Egyptians were one of the most temperate peoples of all times.

They did, however, use aromatic alcohols as a seasoning for almost all dishes. Among the aristocratic families no dish was ever served without them.

Because of the use of aromatic alcohol in their culinary art, drunkenness was almost entirely unknown among the ancient Egyptians.

An Aromatic Bitters . . . .
Angostura is the modern way

Why not imitate the ancient Egyptians who used alcohol in delicious aromatic flavorings added to their favorite dishes? There is a modern way of doing this, which is recommended by the finest chefs in the world. The most famous hotels use Angostura in the kitchen to lend zest to the food.

This delicious appetizer not only creates the desire for food, which is the most powerful weapon in the fight against alcoholism, but it stimulates the secretions of the stomach, so necessary to digestion, which are rendered inactive by over-indulgence in alcohol.

Use a teaspoonful on the grapefruit, in the tomato juice, the fruit cocktail; a half tablespoonful in the soup, in the fish sauces and gravies, on the salad; a few dashes in ice cream, custards, pies, stewed and preserved fruits.

There is no better way to prevent alcoholism. Put it into your food in the form of a delicious flavoring.

Don't wait until it is too late! Buy it now! Put it on the table where he can reach it! Ask for

Virginia Wet Leader Urges Strict Control

1,409 of 1,690 Precincts Give Repeal 42,013 Majority.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 4 (AP).—Virginia repealists maintained a majority of nearly two to one tonight as returns from yesterday's dual referendum of National and State prohibition came in from remote lagging precincts.

Unofficial returns from 1,441 of the State's 1,690 precincts gave 96,102 votes for repeal of the eighteenth amendment and 53,728 against repeal. With a lesser number of precincts reporting on the State prohibition question, continuation of the present liquor laws was given 51,288 votes to 90,442 for substitution of a liquor-control plan.

Complete returns show 15 counties and two cities voted dry. The counties are Mathews, York, Isle of Wight, Nansemond, Prince Edward, Surry, Grayson, Floyd, Montgomery, Roanoke, Rockingham, Giles, Wythe, Augusta and Highland.

Lead in 20 Counties.

The dry cities are Danville and Radford.

The dry vote was leading in 20 other counties on incomplete returns. These counties are Accomac, Lancaster, Middlesex, Northumberland, Southampton, Sussex, Carroll, Charlotte, Halifax, Shenandoah, Bland, Lee, Smyth, Tazewell, Washington, Amherst, Appomattox, Buckingham, Craig and Fluvanna.

The west captured the remaining 22 cities, with the returns complete and carried repeal in 36 counties where the count was completed. Repeal was leading in the other 29 counties on the basis of incomplete returns.

The vote drew comments of gratification of the wet leaders. Outstanding among them was a statement by C. O'Connor Goolrick, of Fredericksburg, who added that "the responsibility for an adequate liquor-control law rests squarely on the shoulders of those who have advocated repeal of the present broken down State liquor law."

Former State Senator G. Walter Mapp, author of the old quart-a-month law, said:

Dry Leader Hopeful.

"Let us hope the results in our State (and Nation) will be as beneficial as the wets claim and less disastrous than the drys fear. We drys should and will give the heartiest cooperation in the promotion of real temperance, and, in turn, we earnestly call on them to cooperate with us in minimizing the admitted evils of the liquor traffic.

"As a member of the commission on liquor control, I shall give the subject the best thought and the most patriotic service of which I am capable."

Gov. Pollard today called the State's liquor control commission to meet here next Wednesday to begin its deliberations on a control plan to be recommended to the regular session of the General Assembly in January.

Lindberghs Fly To English Soil

Arrive From Norway; May Visit Relatives in Wales.

Southampton, England, Oct. 4 (AP) Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh arrived here today after a flight from Stavanger, Norway, and left the airport without revealing their destination.

Lindbergh brough his seaplane down near the Southampton dockhead. The couple came ashore in a rowboat and went through the usual customs formalities.

Both the Colonel and his wife appeared well. Mrs. Lindbergh wore fawn trousers which she later changed for more feminine attire.

It was rumored Mrs. Lindbergh was en route to visit relatives at Cardiff, Wales.

London, Oct. 4 (AP).—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his wife, after flying from Stavenger, Norway, to Southampton, decided they would not come to London for several days yet.

A pilot who flew to Southampton to bring them to Croydon airport if necessary, said Lindbergh "is going to visit some friends in Wales."

A sister of Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Elisabeth Reeve Morrow, was married last December to Aubrey Neil Morgan, of Brynberwen, Llandaff, Wales. Mrs. Morgan was the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow's eldest daughter.

Boyhood Friends in Poland Meet Here as Grandfathers

Two old friends meet in a new land after 35 years' separation. Max Eisenberg, left, and Joseph Rosinsky agree "it's a small world."

Fate stepped in yesterday to reunite two men who had not seen each other since boyhood, 35 years ago, in Poland. A lawyer's office was the setting.

Joseph Rosinsky was consulting Edward J. Reamer in the Evans Building, when Max Eisenberg walked in. Both Rosinsky, a shoe repairman, and Eisenberg, who owns a delicatessen, are Reamer's clients.

"He is a Pinsker," Rosinsky remarked as soon as he saw the visitor. The cobbler is a native of Pinsk, Poland.

The men were introduced by Reamer. Names were recognized and identifications made. Rosinsky and Eisenberg had lived a block from each other and been inseparable companions. Then, when he was 13, Joseph's family moved to another town. A few years later he was drafted into the army, and afterward emigrated to the United States.

Eisenberg left Pinsk in 1913 and settled here three years ago. His friend has been a Washingtonian for 18 years. Since they played together both have become grandparents.

Rosinsky lives at 509 E street northwest, his brother "Pinsker" at 1200 Eleventh street southeast.

Davis Witness Tells of Ticket Boosting Here

Prizes to Be Awarded on Merit, He Testifies Amid Laughter.

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—The defense of Senator James J. Davis and Theodore G. Miller, charged with violating the Federal lottery laws in connection with charity balls conducted by the Loyal Order of Moose, began in a burst of comedy today after the Government rested.

Peter A. McGreevy, Lowell, Mass., rattled off the "sales talk" he said he used to induce Moose lodges in Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia to promote the balls.

McGreevy testified he told the Moose lodges that national prizes would be awarded. He called them "awards of merit," although Assistant United States Attorney Louis Mead Treadwell brought out that the tickets bore printed lists of 229 cash prizes, headed by a $50,000 capital prize.

Treadwell asked McGreevy what he meant by "awards of merit."

"We didn't want to refer to it as awards of cash," he said.

The prosecutor asked him how the awards would be made.

"A committee was to determine that," replied McGreevy.

"What do you mean?"

"Well, by looking at the ticket and the name. It would be up to the committee to determine what the merit was."

(Associated Press.)

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is returning today for her first winter as White House mistress, happy over Arizona's election Tuesday of her friend, Mrs. Isabella Greenway, as representative.

Mrs. Roosevelt, who flew across the State with Mrs. Greenway early in her campaign, has looked forward to a reunion in Washington.

Their story begins in the aristocratic society of New York. They were debutantes at the same time. Eleanor, the niece of the President of the United States, belonged to one of the "oldest" families. Their names were often together in New York society columns.

In March, 1905, Isabella was chosen by Mrs. Roosevelt to be one of the six bridesmaids at her wedding to her cousin, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, the only bridesmaid not a relative. While Mrs. Roosevelt was honeymooning abroad, Isabella Selmes married Jim Ferguson, a Scot, who had galloped with Theodore Roosevelt's Rough Riders.

Marriage rooted Mrs. Roosevelt in the East. Marriage took Mrs. Ferguson to the southwest in quest of better health for her husband, and she became a rancher.

Mrs. Greenway Elected.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 4 (AP).—Isabella Selmes Greenway, friend of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, is Arizona's new representative in Congress by an overwhelming vote.

Plea for Thinkers.

In his Albert Hall address last Tuesday night Professor Einstein touched upon a problem somewhat apart from his main theme—namely, the difficulty of reconciling the pursuit of a living with the prosecution of scientific or philosophical studies requiring intense and undisturbed concentration. It is becoming increasingly difficult for gifted young men to find the necessary leisure for the pursuit of pure science, as Professor Einstein understands the term, in a world in which they are forced by social and economic pressure to show quick results. Research scholarships and grants, Professor Einstein says, are enjoyed by only a few and even in their cases, he points out, the endeavor to reach definite conclusions as quickly as possible often impairs the quality of the results.

The years in which many men of marked ability are best prepared to do original work are apt to be spent in distracting efforts to earn a living. Moreover, those particularly well qualified to pursue independent investigations in pure science frequently are the ones whose patent superiority forces them prematurely into time consuming and energy absorbing occupations of practical life.

With such men in mind, Professor Einstein suggests that there are various ways of making a living which give service to the community while placing a minimum strain upon the mind and body of the individual. He mentions lighthouses and lightships as possible refuges for the harassed thinker. Not all embroyo scientists need the quiet of the sea or the remoteness of mountains in order to think effectively, but the basic thought back of the suggestion is essentially sound. Men of the type to which Professor Einstein refers can not be expected to do the maximum amount of creative work of which they are capable if they are constantly distracted by the demands of an exacting trade or profession that takes toll of their mental and physical energies.

There are, however, many kinds of work to which men may be able to devote the hours spent in earning a living and at the same time do a good deal of constructive thinking. In fact, there are various substitutes for Professor Einstein's lighthouse which meet the needs of the case. Certainly, the great thinkers of the world have not always been subsidized, and most of them have not allowed the business of earning a living to interfere with their main pursuit of knowledge for its own sake.

A Sour Note in the Chorus.

Mrs. Dorothy Bryant, executive secretary for the Chorus Equity Association, yesterday gave a vivid picture to the press of conditions prevailing among the ladies of the footlights. According to Mrs. Bryant some chorus girls are working 93 hours a week in New York theaters. Others report at 7:45 a. m. for dress rehearsal and toil until 11:13 o'clock at night, with only 30 minutes for lunch, 39 minutes free time in the afternoon, 1 hour and 14 minutes for dinner, and 39 minutes free time in the evening. Salaries for this work, it is said, vary from $20 to $26 a week. Mrs. Bryant asserted that the average yearly earnings for 5,500 chorus performers between August, 1932, and August, 1933, were only $515.

Whether Mrs. Bryant will be able to sustain these contentions at the hearings now pending on the motion picture and theatrical code remains to be seen. But allowing 20 per cent for error, it is interesting to note that these supposed symbols of pampered ease and luxury are toiling 12 hours a day for wages that a coal miner might scorn, while in Washington brawny iron workers refuse to finish the statue of their great former chief, Samuel Gompers, because contractors will not accede to a 4-hour day.

The Relief Corporation.

The new Federal relief corporation is undertaking a most difficult task. It is estimated that 15,000,000 individuals will need assistance this winter, and demands upon the Relief Administration are expected to be heavier than ever before. The administration has promised that want and destitution will be relieved. Because of the increased activity of the Government in this field the States and municipalities are more than ever inclined to relinquish their efforts.

The single problem of keeping the unemployed fed and sheltered would be formidable enough, if the new agency had no other objective. But it must also conduct its operations with the view of raising the prices of agricultural products.

Heretofore emergency relief and agricultural relief have been fostered by separate agencies. In some instances the Agricultural Adjustment Administration has cooperated with the Relief Administration, as in the hog reduction campaign. But in this case the A. A. A. was chiefly interested in removing swine from the market, and the distribution of pork to the unemployed was only a by-product of the price-raising venture. According to the latest reports, the Government is obtaining an average of about 14 pounds of cured pork per pig slaughtered. Obviously, Federal relief funds would not go very far if they should be expended in a similar manner.

Will the relief corporation purchase farm products at the lowest available price so as to afford as much relief as possible with its limited funds? Or will it take over produce at artificial prices in order to help the farmer?

Enormous purchases by the Government would be necessary to lift farm prices to the point of so-called parity with industrial goods. If the Federal relief corporation should undertake such a buying campaign, there would be an even greater tendency on the part of State and city agencies to drop the entire relief problem in Uncle Sam's lap. Moreover, the relief fund would soon be exhausted, even though it may be supplemented by revenue from processing taxes, and demands would be made upon Congress for more.

On the Home Grounds.

The Nationals were outplayed by the Giants yesterday. In both pitching and batting the Giants excelled. In the sixth inning a pinch hitter took Crowder's measure, driving in two runs and starting a batting festival that netted six runs in that one inning and won the game. Schumacher seemed to be as puzzling to the Nats as Hubbell had been the day before. Thomas, who was set to work after Crowder had granted seven hits in one inning, was fortunate in holding down the Giants, but the Nationals were unable to get anywhere at bat.

Now comes the tug of war at Washington. Yesterday's game challenges all the fighting spirit of the Nationals. It was all right for the Giants to take their first game in their home town, with their wizard hurler at work, but when they repeat the performance, and against Al Crowder, it is time for the Nationals to stop them.

That the Nationals will turn the tables is indicated by their achievements during the league season, when they were confronted with even more difficult situations. They will be on their home grounds, with all the advantages which are supposed to accrue from that fact, including the inspiration that comes from the enthusiasm of admiring fans.

Although unsettled weather threatens, with an east wind which may bring an interruption of the series, it is ardently hoped by Washington's excited baseball addicts that the tide of battle will be reversed at Griffith Stadium today. The Nationals will find no lack of enthusiasm or confidence in the crowd that is scheduled to greet them.

Local Option in Virginia.

Virginia's change of heart with respect to prohibition has been apparent for several months. The heavy majority of votes registered for repeal was fully expected. The drys made a feeble effort to avert this inevitable decision, but they were beaten before the campaign began. Such an overwhelming sentiment against the prohibition regime has been built up throughout the Nation that superhuman efforts would have been required to have held the Old Dominion within the dry ranks.

Since the outcome of the repeal vote was anticipated, interest centers upon the decision of Virginia's electorate to revert to a system of local control over liquor. The Old Dominion has turned against State prohibition as well as the eighteenth amendment. The manufacture and sale of liquor has been illegal in that State since 1916. Citizens of Virginia have had ample opportunity to observe the operation of both State and national prohibition, and apparently they are dissatisfied with the results in both cases.

Tuesday's ballots advised the legislature to set up a control system that will prevent return of the saloon and give local communities the right to vote for or against legalization of liquor traffic within their borders. This trend toward liberalization of local statutes dealing with liquor has been noted in other parts of the country. From the extreme of national prohibition the pendulum is swinging in the opposite direction. Citizens are disgusted with prohibitory statutes that enable bootleggers to thrive. Emphasis now is being placed upon control and strict regulation.

It is impossible to forecast the outcome of these new attempts to deal with the liquor issue. Grave problems are arising in some of the States. Ultimately they will have to be settled by the voters of States or local communities. At least, the new arrangement will enable each State to provide the type of liquor control desired by a majority of its people.

Civil Service Ignored.

Efforts to absorb discharged civil service employees into the new Federal agencies have been disappointing. These organizations hired 1,724 new workers during August, but records of the Civil Service Commission show that only 145 of them were drawn from the list of experienced civil service employees who have been released in the process of reorganizing various executive departments.

Approximately 2,000 persons are still enrolled upon the Civil Service Commission's reemployment register. Many of them are experienced in the type of work that is available in the various emergency organizations. Yet only three of these agencies—the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, the United States Employment Service and the Tennessee Valley Authority—are taking advantage of the commission's aid. The National Recovery Administration hired 1,077 men and women in August and the Public Works Administration increased its force by 288, but it is reported that none of these employees was drawn from the civil service list.

From the viewpoint of both the Government and these jobless workers this outcome of the civil service reemployment campaign is unfortunate. Men and women who have passed competitive tests and whose services to the Government have proved satisfactory apparently have been sidetracked in favor of individuals with political backing.

These employees were separated from the service because of the necessity of reducing governmental expenditures. A large number of others, however, have been placed upon the Federal pay rolls, with the result that the total number of Government workers in Washington has increased in recent months. New organizations have been built up almost as fast as old bureaus and commissions have been trimmed down. But to a considerable extent, at least, the new agencies have obtained their personnel through political patronage.

Filipinos Want New Deal.

Independence for the Philippine Islands appears to be more remote now than at any time since the Hawes-Cutting act was passed. The political leaders at Manila are not willing to decide the issue themselves, nor to have the people vote on acceptance of the act in its present form. Reports indicate that the plan for a plebiscite has broken down, and that a new commission will be sent to Washington to seek amendment of the law under which independence may be obtained.

The time is brief during which the Philippine legislature may exercise its discretion under the independence act. The act was passed over President Hoover's veto last January 17. It allows one year during which a constitutional convention may assemble at Manila. In other words, the legislature must provide for the election of delegates to such a convention and that body must meet before January 17, 1934, if the terms of the act are to be complied with. If plans for a plebiscite should be revived, the Filipinos would have to go to the polls twice in a little more than three months to vote on independence issues.

But the legislature has manifested no intention of setting new constitutional machinery in motion. Objections to the Hawes-Cutting act overshadow the strong Filipino desire for separation from the United States. These objections center about two provisions in the act. One would permit the President of the United States to designate land now owned by the Government for military or naval reservations to be held perpetually by this country. The other would restrict free importation of Philippine sugar and other products to this country during the 10-year transition period. The Filipinos wish to send their produce free to the American market until complete independence is an actuality.

An independence mission came here shortly after the Hawes-Cutting act was passed, to investigate the possibility of securing enactment of a measure more favorable to the islands. These delegates returned without finding any indications that Congress would reconsider the matter. They probably learned, also, that the most active sponsors of independence legislation are the agricultural interests seeking to eliminate Philippine sugar, cocoanut oil and other products from the American market.

There has been no indication that the Congress is likely to eliminate import restrictions from the act. Nevertheless, it will be interesting to see what the Filipino mission will propose.

There's no place like home grounds.

Chorus of Washington fans: "We do our part!"

Now is the time for the Nationals to join the grand march toward recovery.

Life in China.

By Ralph Townsend, in Current History.

Unresponsive to appeals for collective efforts to check their oppressors, the 395,000,000 Chinese—out of a possible population of 400,000,000—constitute the most easily intimidated people in the world. Day after day, advantage is taken of this submissiveness by bandits, war lords, pirates, wholesale extortion gangs in every town and city, duly accredited provincial and central government officials and military chieftains on a scale probably never paralleled in the world's history. The magnitude of the looting and the intensity of the cruelty appall even persons well prepared by previous knowledge of Chinese condtiions.

The wonder is how the Chinese continue to survive. Naturally, a good many do not, but there is a curious equilibrium between integration and disintegration. Most Chinese live on farms or in nearby villages, producing food and small shop or handmade goods and exchanging them with one another. Neither group is affected by distant economicupheavals. When the peasant hears that an army is coming, he either flees with what he can carry or else stands his ground, hiding whatever is portable. When the army has passed he is left picked to the bone, but he stolidly proceeds to make a fresh start.

The lot of the Chinese in the towns is even more hazardous. The soldiers quartered there to "protect" the storekeepers from the bandits often seize most of the stocks themselves. Both urban and rural groups are taxed and scourged beyond belief. Millions are ruined every year. But the survivors tenaciously keep going with what the day offers. If the situation becomes too bad the men try to enlist in the army, thus acquiring the privilege of turning upon their fellows. Those with means commonly try to transfer their property to one of the treaty ports.

Despite all the distress there are signs in the towns of lively spending. The opium racketeers, the bandit chiefs, the successful military leaders, comprise a market, small but profitable, for automobiles, phonographs, gasoline and California canned fruit. Their women like American lipstick and perfume. They all like American jazz and moving pictures. The nation as a whole groans; the few hundred thousand who profit by the plunder feast and fox trot; the two or three million identifiably Christian pray; and the handful of the enligthened and educated agonize in the columns of struggling weekly newspapers over a situation which they can not alter and about the results of which no one can be optimistic.

HAVANA REVOLUTION.

(By Elmer Twitchell, Special Havana Correspondent and Eyewitness.)

Havana, Cuba.—It's a revolution! I talked it over with American tourists here after the several days' fighting and the belief that it was a Mardi Gras has been practically eliminated from their minds.

It was pretty hard to convince some of the Americans; in fact, I was a holdout myself until the last few hours, as I had paid no attention to the shooting that had been going on all over Havana for the past six weeks, most of it being into the air.

• • • •

I was stopping at the Hotel Nacional, which some Americans built here a few years ago, when the only shooting around Havana was being done with a hypodermic needle at the race track. Americans built the hotel by subscription, not knowing they were contributing $4,000,000 to a privately owned fortress. Even from Havana I could hear their groans back home when they got the news of the bombardment and realized that they would have done just as well by rebuilding Morro Castle.

• • • •

For the past month I have had a nice room with an ABC exposure overlooking the general confusion. It was a splendid hotel, with hot and cold rumors in every room and with practically every modern convenience for a revolution, but even at that we had no idea what was going on. There was a lot of shooting, of course, but the noise wasn't any worse than that made by American visitors during their first 24 hours in Havana.

• • • •

Several weeks ago some of the guests began to complain and leave the hotel because they couldn't sleep well, and a few days ago I noticed that even the manager and Ambassador Welles had left, but I didn't think anything of it, as I don't play bridge, anyhow. The other morning, however, I was aroused by something heavy in bed with me, and, upon investigating, I found a shell fragment, still hot. I said to myself something must be wrong, and as I looked out of the window I saw a number of shells crash through the building. By this time I was getting pretty suspicious.

• • • •

Well, I ran downstairs, as there were no elevators, and found a note from the ambassador reading "Out to lunch. Back in two years," and as I walked onto the front portico a hundred Cuban soldiers, not 20 feet away, fired at me point blank. If I had been 19 feet closer they would have hit me.

• • • •

"Hey!" I shouted to one of the soldiers, pointing to a hole in the hotel. "Do you know you have hit a building?"

Well, he could hardly believe it, as he had been in the Cuban army all his life, but he was so delighted that he agreed to escort me to an American battleship if I would sign his score card, attesting to the fact he had hit a building. He said nobody would believe it otherwise.

• • • •

By this time I gathered that it wouldn't be very comfortable even in a $4,000,000 hotel, and so I signed the testimonial and got to an American battleship, which was off Havana for the purpose of keeping itself from intervening.

It was a close call, I guess, but I am feeling fine. Yours,

ELMER.

NO OVERTIME, EITHER.

Rear Admiral Byrd has given his explorers the 8-hour day. Slogan: "Understand, boss, if we don't find the Pole by 4 p. m. we quit anyhow."

There will be no holding those Cuban sharpshooters now that they have managed to hit the biggest hotel in Havana at 30 paces.

"Who do you think will win in that Cuban clash?" we asked a dozen men this morning, and they all replied "I dunno. Who's pitching?"

F. M. K. says that if McKee wins and makes things hard for the New York racketeers they won't care, as they will pick a site and move to New Jersey.

Daily Talks About Books and Authors

THREE GOOD NOVELS

Although their author is living in Hartford, Wis., it may be that all three of these books are out of print. If so, I advise you to go to the nearest public library and read them. Their author is Charles D. Stewart, plihosopher, scholar and man of letters.

In 1905 he produced "The Fugitive Blacksmith," which describes among other things sheep-raising in Texas; the story is very close to actual life, and so long as I live, I shall remember how the man was caught in a swamp by a dying cow, and how he finally saved himself by catching a bull's tail.

"Partners of Providence" appeared in 1907. While entirely original, it is more like "Huckleberry Finn" than any other novel I know. The two chief characters are the Mississippi and the Missouri Rivers, and he shows how for some time after the merger, the former refuses to have anything to do with the latter.

In "Valley Waters," which was published in 1922, he returned to the city of his birth, Zanesville, Ohio, where the rivers meet. We formed a literary party some years ago and made a pilgrimage to Zanesville to see the meeting of the waters so picturesquely described in the story.

These are three good novels, which every one will enjoy. And they have thought as well as style.

Willie May Plan to Lick the Teacher, But He Doesn't Dream of Trying It Now

By Robert Quillen.

Did it ever occur to you to wonder how the smaller nations, such as Holland, Denmark and Norway, contrive to live in peace and security among their powerful neighbors?

The explanation is very simple.

Knowing they have no chance to win a war against a great nation, they make no effort to arm for such a conflict.

Knowing they are helpless, they do nothing to provoke their great neighbors.

And because they are neither armed nor aggressive and could not wage war effectively, the great nations have no reason to suspect or fear them and therefore feel no desire to destroy them.

Nobody pulls the teeth of a harmless snake. It was fear that made Rome destroy Carthage.

America has no reason to fear any nation, but it does not follow that she is safe from the dreadful business of war.

Serious students and statesmen in all lands are discussing the probability of war between America and Japan. Many of them say such a war is inevitable.

Does it not seem strange to you that America should be destined to fight when she apparently has nothing to fight about?

Why is there talk of war between these two nations now when there was no such talk a few years ago? What has happened to make war more probable?

There was a long period following Japan's awakening when Americans felt an amused and tolerant affection for the Japanese. The little fellows were so polite and so eager to please that nobody could dislike them. The attitude of America was that of a benevolent old gentleman toward an especially bright litlte boy.

Why was there no talk of war during that period?

Because America had no desire to mistreat a small and inoffensive neighbor, and because Japan realized her weakness and knew she would be defeated promptly and thoroughly.

No nation willingly makes war if it has no hope of winning.

America was so much stronger than Japan that neither nation thought of war.

Why, then, has war become a probability? Simply and solely because Japan has become strong and now has some hope of winning.

If that is true, why look further for a way to insure peace? The condition that once made war impossible will serve the same purpose again. The gamest buck never attacks a peaceful elephant.

Press Comment

Only a Name.

Boston Transcript.

There may be some who still recall the dismal day in 1878 when the news was flashed over the wires of the world that the Akhoond of Swat was dead. Still in many an inward ear reverberate the lines written by George Lanigan, of Rochester, in tribute to that deceased prince:

What, what, what,
What's the news from Swat?
Sad news,
Bad news.
• • • • • • • •
The Akhoond is dead.

Even in those far-off days when potentates were potentates, that was a high-sounding title—almost as grandiloquent as Haroun al Raschid, Caliph of Bagdad. Few such remain except in the Far East; there are even now rulers of Indian principalities whose names bring up visions of lacs of roupees, of diamonds and rubies the size of pigeon's eggs, names that belong in the Arabian Nights.

But there is one who no longer walks, nor rides his elephants, for he has gone to his long home, and he is His Highness Mohamed Ibni Almerhum Antah, the Yang Dipertuan Besar of the Negri Sembilan. Now, Negri Sembilan is one of the Federated Malay States; it is a fifth the size of Massachusetts, and has a long shore line on the Strait of Malacca. But as for his highness with the long name, like the Akhoond of Swat, he had to wait for death to noise his fame abroad.

Uses of Fingerprinting.

New York Herald Tribune.

In these latter years police officials, who have an opportunity to address the general public in print or person, almost never fail to make strong pleas for the fingerprinting of every citizen. Such pleas they support with a great variety of arguments to which one can take no reasonable exception. As they always point out, the control of criminal activities is just one of many important uses of the fingerprint system.

The identification of the victims of violence, kidnaping, accidents, sudden illnesses, amnesia, wrongful arrest, embarrassing cases of mistaken identity, and so forth, would be easy if all were fingerprinted (or footprinted at birth), and if all fingerprints were on record at a Federal bureau. If each traveler within the United States carried an identification card, as a kind of domestic passport, with his fingerprints on the margin of his photograph, he would never have the slightest difficulty in establishing his identity in any city that had a police fingerprint bureau.

American Economic Nationalism.

Claude Cockburn, in Everyman (London).

So far from withdrawing from the world, America will become increasingly dependent on foreign markets if the "recovery program" is to be kept going without a disastrous hitch. Hence the planned conference with the South American states at Montevideo in December. Hence the growing anxiety of the American Government regarding the stranglehold being established by Japan on Far Eastern markets. Hence the desperate attempts being made to come to an agreement with the Russians for the absorption by Russia of a large portion of American output. Hence the battle of the dollar and the pound, which is a battle for foreign markets.

Along the Potomac

With

Carlisle Bargeron

HARDLY a day passes that the Nation's Capital does not become increasingly enchanting. I am not referring so much to the autumnal hue that is now overspreading our roads and avenues but rather to the things which hold one's interest as no other city in the country; indeed, the things that tickle one pink, keep him in a constant uproar of mirth.

Bargeron.

Other cities, of course, have their excavations to hold the loiterer's attention, but nearly all of the time here we have a Senate committee investigation. One going on just now, that on air mail and ship subsides, is more fun than you can shake a stick at.

• • • •

OF course, it isn't so much fun for those involved. Among the ranks of Washington "representatives" of big business it is apt to cause considerable unrest, just as it would cause in any group for the salaries of various individuals to become known. There is Bascom Slemp, for instance. In the shipping bonanza it appears his fee was whacked down and from a comparatively pitiably small bill, at that, whacked down to $15,000, I believe the testimony was.

Then along comes Bill Donovan and gets a slice of $100,000. How is Bascom to feel when he hears of this?

Bill did write a letter to Mr. Hoover in the interest of his client, but Bascom could have written one, too. In fact, Bascom had more contact with the last administration than Bill. He was given the junket to Paris—our representative at some Paris centennial, whether it was "bi" or "sesqui" has slipped my mind. Bascom, indeed, was our participation in the celebration.

• • • •

ONE who witnessed it will never forget Bill's withdrawal from Washington official life. It was just a few days before Mr. Hoover's administration. He had just learned that he was not to be Attorney General. Rushing from Mr. Hoover's home on S street, he exclaimed dramatically to the newspaper boys: "The Black Horse Troop got me." We've always assumed he meant Walter Brown and the late Jimmy Good. They are said to have shown Mr. Hoover statistically that as a vote-puller in the campaign that had just ended, Bill was nil.

Bill dropped immediately out of the picture, but it is quite apparent he maintains a very active office here. His friends always insisted thereafter that Bill had been mistreated grossly by Mr. Hoover. The more superstitious, in fact, contended it was mistreatment of such friends as Bill that later brought Mr. Hoover so much grief—retribution, so to speak.

But in the light of the ship subsidy hearing it is difficult to believe Bill has been mistreated by anybody. It would seem, in fact, that he is very capable of taking care of himself.

• • • •

THE newspaper fraternity always gets added fun out of these committee investigations when some of their names bob up. Up now bobs Tom Shipp, one of whose jobs apparently was to educate the newspapermen in the intricacies of the shipping game. No one of us ever would have thought to call Tom an educator, though he may be that. The point is that we simply had not looked upon him that way.

Oh, it's all good, wholesome fun. And for the life of me I can't understand why there should be so much talk just now of the redistribution of wealth, so much excitement about it, when every time we have a committee investigation of the ship subsidy kind we hear of the redistribution that has been going on all along.

Can it mean that the redistribution from now is to be for the benefit of the Democratic "representatives" of business that are flooding the town? Come to think of it, the Senate committee might bring their studies up-to-date were they to let by-gones be by-gones and look into the current goings-on.

The Democratic "representatives" are no different in hue or design from the Republicans. Experience, though, has impressed them with the impermanence of their regime.

So they work faster.

Just Folks.

Plea for Courage.

Would God would grant me grace today
One timely thought to think and say
To one who gropes
'Mid shattered hopes
And fancies all is lost and gone
To hearten him and cheer him on.

Would I could find amid the maze
Of words a simple line or phrase
Which I could say
This very day
To one who walks his way in doubt
And draw his faltering spirit out.

"Let not your heart be troubled!" said
The Master, twenty centuries dead.
And down the years
Through care and tears
To Him, when hearts with anguish burned
The multitudes have bravely turned.

Hold fast and falter not today!
Before us lies the better way.
The future awaits
Beyond the gates!
Step forth undaunted by despair.
Courage and faith can conquer care!

Costly Overbidding.

Human greed plays an important part in the bidding of hands at Contract. Naturally we like to get all that is coming to us and then some, and at the same time we are anxious to deprive our opponents—for the moment, our enemies—of as much that is rightfully theirs as we can. Perhaps this is a rather crude explanation of some of the faults of overbidding that we see so often at the Bridge table. I have frequently said, and I reiterate, that it is much less costly to overbid than to underbid, but with all things there should be moderation and temperance.

I was watching a rubber of Bridge at Crockford's Club, New York, recently, in which I saw a lady step entirely out of character to undertake a contract of five clubs as a defensive measure against vulnerable opponents when her sole honor holding was one Queen in a suit adversely bid and her trumps were a magnificent array of small cards, marshaled by a lordly eight-spot. The bidding itself was somewhat unique and unusual.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

South	West	North	East
1♠	Dbl.(1)	2♡(2)	3♣(3)
3NT(4)	4♣(5)	4◇(6)	5♣(7)
Dbl.(8)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A somewhat shaded Double, but probably justified because of the score. After all, West is well prepared for a heart response and can stand either a diamond or club bid should his partner make it.

2—While North lacks adequate support for his partner's spade bid, he has a very fine two-suited hand and, of course, can not permit him from showing it.

3—A very daring bid, indeed, but East reasons that if there is any defense in the hand it must be in the club suit as spades and hearts have been bid adversely and so, by a process of elimination, West must be marked with honors in the club suit.

4—South hesitated between this and a Penalty Double of three clubs, but he finally decided that game should be available to North and South and that the makable game should be more valuable than a penalty from nonvulnerable adversaries.

5—West should pass. From his hand a contract of three notrump looks fairly difficult. His Takeout Double was based on minimum values and he should thus visualize the probability that further bidding may result disastrously.

7—Certainly a daring bid.

8—South now feels that virtue and restraint bring their due reward. Refraining from doubling three for penalties with great effort, he now has the opportunity to double five.

To make a long story short, East in the play achieved a minimum of tricks and scored a total of only 5, being defeated 1,350 points. It was perhaps slight satisfaction, when the inevitable postmortem followed, to see that North and South, with their holdings, could have made six diamonds, losing only one trick to the diamond King. However, it is highly improbable that North and South would have reached this contract in the face of the Takeout Double by West and the extremely strong bidding of both opponents.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If South is playing the hand below at a contract of two spades, to what suit should West shift after winning the first two tricks with the King and Queen of diamonds?

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Pocket Radio Here to Cheer Dull Evenings

By Ruth Anne Davis.

Life is getting more and more complicated now, when it comes to the point where your friends call up and not only say "come on over to dinner and bring the family," but "bring the radio, too!" It sounds rather startling at first, but after you've seen the new midget radio, the little novice starting out small to make a big noise in the world, the radio for the vest pocket, or the desk drawer, you won't be surprised when your friends say don't forget to bring it along. If you've never known popularity because you couldn't play the piano, you can begin now with the midget, which guarantees you "personality plus."

When your friends ask you to sing for them, reach in your pocket and turn the dial. If they ask you to play, turn it again.

"That," said the proprietor very proudly, "is a beverage churn." He pointed to a long, slender piece of glasswork with stripes running up and down on it, which looks very much like an elongated bud vase.

"It's engraved glass," he continued, "and of very excellent workmanship. The top and the churn paddle are silver plated, so they will wear for many years after there's nothing to wear on."

Alongside the churn is a delightful cocktail set to match, including a shaker and glasses of the same engraved glass. But that isn't all—there also is a hand-wrought iron ash stand which completes the set. They may be bought separately, of course, but surely such works of art should all go together, don't you think?

If you need a cake box or a tray, why not buy them both together? An F street store has a cake box which includes a very ornamental tray in brown and gold.

These may be used also to send cakes for long distances. It keeps them in excellent condition. There are two sizes, one, 50 cents, the other, 75.

When a products company realizes it has a good thing on the market, it does well to stick by it. But when it realizes its setting is inadequate, it does well to remedy it. Such generalities apply in particular to the manufacturers of a certain hand and face lotion which has been popular for many years.

This week the company has put its product on the market in very striking bottles which look as though they might have taken their pattern from some of the distinctive exhibits at the Century of Progress Exposition. It is modeled conservatively, yet entirely modernistically, so that it will be ornamental to milady's dressing table as well as useful to her face and hands.

Lamps are getting more and more "bridgey," according to the new ones on display in a downtown store. These are not ordained only for bridge, but are bridges in themselves. They are arranged to clamp on to opposite corners of the table with little ashtrays. Two slender rods extend upward and across so that the parchment shade hangs suspended over the middle of the table.

You can readily see what an asset this form of lighting will be to the serious bridge player. No matter how fond one is of the game, she does not like to play with the bright light beating directly down upon her, or with it shining in her eyes. This new arrangement takes care of both difficulties. Yours in red, green or black for $2.95.

Wood is the high light in buttons this season, we would be led to believe from the number on the ready made dresses and the demand for them in the department stores.

One downtown store has a most unusual and varied assortment in natural wood, hand-carved, with buckles to match. These also come in colored wood to serve as a contrast or to match your frock.

Perhaps among the most unusual are the bamboo buttons and buckles tipped in galaleith, or trimmed in red, green or brown. The buttons are $2.50 a dozen; the buckles, $1.95, and clips to match are $1.

Laundry bags are not limited to mere service. They can be an ornament to any room. A G street store has some that look like little Dutch boys or girls, with doll heads. Some of them are hodge-podges of colors; others more conservative. Whichever type you prefer is yours for 79 cents.

High Oxford of Suede, Patent Leather Latest

A seven-eyelet oxford, made of suede and patent leather, is one of fashion's newest offerings. You can imagine how high it comes on the instep, to work in all those eyelets, but it's very flattering to a small foot with a slender ankle. Wool shoes with leather trimmings also are being shown.

What's in Fashion?

Directed by Amos Parrish.

Blue may be a fashionable color for sports outfits, but is decidedly unfashionable for sporting noses. And therein lies one of the secrets of the smart 1933 football cheering costume. Whatever individual line it follows in cut or color, it should be warm and wooly looking.

Information as to where styles of the type illustrated and their variations are available in Washington will be given by the Fashion Department, The Washington Post, on request.

That puts tweeds, hairy-surfaced knits, thickish ribbed wools and gay plaids into the football fashion lineup. Topped off, of course, by more tweeds or furs or snug suedes as the weather gets cooler.

Sportiest Outfits.

One of the sportiest of all outfits is made up of the three items illustrated . . . a suede jacket, plaid wool skirt and cozy turtle-neck sweater.

Incidentally, it's smart to muffle your throat even though you don't muffle your cheers. And aside from wearing turtle-neck sweaters, you can do it fashionably with bright plaid mufflers, velveteen ascots or dresses and coats with their own tied scarf necklines.

Plaid skirts are at their best in brown-and-green, brown-and-beige, navy-and-red and black-and-red.

Twin Sweaters.

You can wear twin sweater sets with them, too—the smart pullover-and-cardigan combination. But whatever type of sweater you choose it should match or harmonize with one of the predominating colors of the skirt. Such as a yellow, rust or green sweater with the brown-and-green plaid.

Brown is the best all-round useful color for a suede jacket. But dark red or dark green have their place, too, in the make-up of special costumes.

Plaid Dresses.

If you prefer to look less actively sporty but still in the holiday mood, a one-piece dress of a bright wool plaid gives you the smart-and-comfortable combination. (And makes a good dress about-town, too). Top this off with a solid color velveteen scarf matching one of the less dominant colors in the plaid, and you've made exactly the right accent.

Lots of these plaid dresses are going to be worn with fur jackets. And that's a bright idea, too, since it lets some of your gay plaid show.

Hairy knits and ribbed wools in bright colors make a fine team with the classic tweed swagger coat. And that's the place to tuck in one of the gay plaid mufflers. Choose it to harmonize with both dress and coat and your costume is a sure winner.

The Family Marketer

Belgium Sends Delectable Grapes and Endive to Washington.

Moroccan grapes come to the Washington markets from California, brussel sprouts from Ohio and French endive from Belgium. We wonder at this point just what is in a name. The genealogy of fruits and vegetables might clear up the point, but we, as marketers, must confess the quality and the price are the obvious limits of our research.

However, it is interesting to see the Belgium import, the endive. It looks for the world like a bunch of lightweight celery. The dealers say it has in other seasons been a good seller on account of its unusual flavor and reasonable price. Although it's 60 cents a pound, a quarter of a pound is enough for a good-sized salad. Later in the season it will harden up a bit and sell for less, but just now it's in the prime of tenderness.

Native Endive Best.

The native endive takes the beauty honors. Few vegetables compete in charm of color and form with the lacy, light and dark-green bunches. Lettuce, of course, can always be depended on to substantiate a salad and give it a cool and crispy look, but the endive adds delicacy of appearance and, unless we're careful to choose only the inner leaves, a bitter taste.

The lettuce on the market today has come from nearby Maryland and Virginia, New York and California. The local is dark green and very leafy. An old German recipe suggests taking this garden variety and serve with hot bacon juice, which has been flavored with lemon and vinegar. Try it, if you like, but there's no guarantee. Home lettuce sells from 5 to 10 cents a bunch.

Belgian Grapes, Too.

Belgium is not only making good with the endive, but grapes as well. And, judging from the price of them, 75 cents a pound, we'll have to make good, too, to buy them. However, they are considered very proper delicacies for dinner parties. We can count on their being in excellent condition, as they come wrapped in cotton in excelsior boxes. The finishing touch would be inclosed directions for polishing.

The second and last crop of corn is here, but going fast. Despite the fact that the ears are somewhat ragged, the kernels still retain a sweet juiciness.

Housewives generally have their own particular way of preparing succotash, but here's an easy recipe: Use the same amount of corn as lima beans or string beans. Saute both in butter, adding salt and pepper. Thicken with a little veloute sauce or any kind you prefer. Some people use tomatoes.

The California peaches on the market today are liable to tempt you. They're quite large, colorful morsels, which look as though they'd fairly melt in your mouth at a taste, but, alas and alack, they lack the flavor of our home-grown variety. However, with plenty of sugar and thick cream, they make a very nice dessert.

We've enjoyed cantaloupe for a long season now, but it looks like they're leaving us. The latest shipments from Colorado haven't been up to par. They've been such a favorite melon this summer it's with extreme regret we bid them a fond adieu. Not that we have to, of course, for they'll continue to straggle in for another month, but it's rather too bad to spoil the memories of some of the choice ones of the season with those on hand now.

Grapefruit from Florida, however, are making up for the cantaloupe disappointment. They're selling for 5 cents to 15 cents apiece.

Cultured Voice Lends Beauty To Plain Face

Soft, Well-Modulated Tone Gives Indefinable Charm to Any Woman.

A cultivated voice, soft, modulated, full of personality and warmth, lends indefinable charm to a woman.

It may be less tangibly beautiful than a classic nose, or petal-pink lips, but it is infinitely more interesting. And beauty of features quickly loses interest, if their vocal concomitant is raucous and disturbing.

Business and professional people, with frequent occasion to talk with strangers by telephone, know the magnetic quality exerted by a properly modulated, distinctly enunciating voice.

Most people with beautiful singing voices have melodious speaking voices. While all can't be born with the former, they can do much to cultivate the latter.

Proper breathing has much to do with voice cultivation. Morning breathing exercises should be practised carefully. Standing by an open window, draw 25 to 50 deep, lung-filling breaths, slowly and rhythmically. Reading aloud helps. Listen carefully to the tones of your voice as you enunciate the words. Speak slowly, giving to each word its full value, to each syllable its unslurred pronunciation.

Hurried speech, sing-song tones, or a monotonous dead-level of tonal quality makes the most brilliant eloquence, the wittiest passages, boring to a degree.

Throat, jaws, lips, teeth and tongue must be brought into play in developing a full-toned interesting voice. Too many people use lips, tongue and teeth alone.

Classes in elocution and public speaking are an excellent investment for those who can afford them. In addition to improving the voice, they give poise. Those who cannot afford such courses should look to members of their immediate family for help. Their criticism usually can be depended upon as frank and helpfully intended.

Use of colloquialisms, slang and superlatives is to be avoided for the most part. Idiosyncrasies of speech, such as beginning sentences with "Look—," "Say—," "Listen—," should be eschewed. They detract from the superficial cultural standard of the speaker and give a deadly sameness to his conversational overtures.

Fear of Critics Is Foe of Art, Teacher Says

"Y" Class Director Tells How Puppets Help; Show Planned.

"When they lay aside self consciousness, people in average walks of life uncover to the discerning eye as much creative talent as I have ever found in art schools," Mrs. Maria Von Vrooman, director of art classes at Washington's Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, said yesterday.

"Scientific experiments have shown children doing remarkable creative things with color, material and line, until they are made self-conscious by adult criticism," she commented. "Criticism nearly always throws them off the track."

Mrs. Vrooman is introducing a class in puppet histrionics at the "Y" this year, to augment classes in puppet play writing and costume designing, which enlisted considerable following last winter.

"This is a new and amusing method for teaching laws of dramatic expression," she explained. "That marionettes develop a personality all their own in some weird manner, all puppeteers agree. The deus ex machina learns to project his personality into the little dangling mimic before him.

"The familiar story of Cinderella and her Prince will be the vehicle for our first venture in puppet dramatics this winter," Mrs. Vrooman said. "There will be six to eight leading characters and a number of minor actors. We will build our own stage. The mechanics of producing and costuming are quite as important as play writing and acting."

Through her art classes at "Y," Mrs. Vrooman, who is Washington born, and studied abroad, hopes to develop a new method of dramatic expression.

"When people are given opportunity to express their histrionic and artistic talents through a medium divorced from self—as they are through marionettes or puppets—very often they reveal surprising gifts," she said.

The puppet class met for the first time at the Y. W. C. A. Wednesday evening, while this winter's class in puppet story writing was organized last Monday. On Friday evening of this week the class in costume designing will assemble for registration.

Fruit and Meat Can Be Joined In Dainty Dishes

Delicious Combinations Are Suggested for Gala Occasions.

(Miss Ruth Chambers, whose articles start today as a daily feature of this paper, is a home economics lecturer and writer of wide experience. She is a member of the staff of the National Live Stock and Meat Board, has done considerable work in experimental cookery and is a dietician of note.—Editor.)

By Ruth Chambers.

Have you ever wished to serve some extra-special dish for a gala occasion, to entertain your choicest guests, to celebrate an anniversary or just because you felt an urge to "step out" in a culinary way? Not only do you want your dinner to taste delicious, but you want it to look especially nice, something a little different from the kind of roast or steak you've served so many times.

This "dressy" appearance, as well as new and delicious flavoring, may be achieved by the use of fruit in the main dish. Fruit may be combined with meat in many ways, and from a dietetic, as well as a decorative standpoint, the union is a happy one. The Chinese learned about that a great many years ago.

Oranges with roast pork, cranberries with ribs of beef, apples and pork chops, pears and leg of veal, mint apples and leg of lamb, bananas and steak, these are a few of the possible combinations, and here are recipes.

Roast Pork with Sweet Potato Oranges.

1 pork loin
6 oranges, uniform in size
6 sweet potatoes
6 marshmallows
Butter
Flour
Salt
Pepper

Have a loin of pork prepared at the market with the chine bone sawed loose from the ribs. Wipe the meat with a damp cloth, dredge with flour and season with salt and pepper. If you have a meat thermometer, insert it so that the bulb reaches the center of the roast. Place roast on a rack in an uncovered roasting pan. Sear for fifteen minutes in a hot oven (480 degrees F.). Reduce the temperature to 325 degrees F., and continue cooking until the roast is done. (When the meat thermometer registers 185 degrees F. the roast is done.) Allow 30 minutes per pound for roasting.

Cut a slice off the top of the oranges and scoop out the pulp. Scallop the edges with a sharp knife. Pare and boil sweet potatoes. Mash. Mix with some of the orange pulp, season with salt, pepper and butter. Fill the orange cups with this mixture and place in the oven to heat. Two or three minutes before serving remove from the oven, top each orange with a marshmallow and put back in the oven to puff and slightly brown the marshmallows. Serve orange cups around roast pork on a large platter.

Roast Leg of Veal With Stuffed Pears.

1 leg veal
6 pears, halved
1 package cream cheese
1 teaspoon paprika
Salt
Pepper

Wipe the veal carefully. Rub with salt and pepper and place on rack in roasting pan with the skin side up. Insert meat thermometer so that the bulb reaches the center of the fleshiest part of the muscle, taking care that it does not touch fat or bone. Place in a very hot oven previously heated to 500 degrees F. and sear without covering for 15 or 20 minutes. At the end of this time reduce the temperature rapidly to 260 degrees F. Cover the roaster and continue cooking until the roast is done. When the meat thermometer registers 160 degrees F. the roast is well done. Allow 25 minutes per pound. Do not add water.

Work paprika well into the cheese. Form into balls and place in the center of the pear halves. Place around the roast a few minutes before it is done. When the cheese melts, remove and serve around the roast.

Broiled Steak With Bananas.

1 sirloin steak, 4 bananas, butter, paprika, salt and pepper.

Have the steak cut from 1 to 2 inches thick. Preheat the broiler for several minutes, having the regulator set at 50 degrees F. Place the steak on the center of the broiler rack so that there is a distance of about three inches between the flame and the top of the steak. When the steak is nicely browned on one side, turn and brown the other. The steak will be done when the second side is browned. Only one turning is necessary. For a 2-inch steak allow 30 to 40 minutes to be medium done.

Cut bananas into slices and brown in butter until a golden brown. Serve around the steak.

Pork Chops and Rose Apples.

6 large pork chops
1 egg
1 tablespoon milk
3 tablespoons fat
Bread crumbs, sifted
3 large tart apples
1 cup sugar
½ cup water
½ cup red cinnamon candies
Salt and pepper

Have the bones removed from the chops and trim into neat rounds. Dip each in egg beaten with milk, then into fine, dry bread crumbs. Brown in a frying pan about 10 minutes. Add about 2 tablespoons water, place in a moderate oven (365 degrees Fahrenheit) for about 45 minutes or until chops are tender.

Pare, core and halve the apples crosswise. Make a syrup of sugar, red cinnamon candies and water. Simmer the apples in this until tender and a bright red, being careful that they are not broken. Arrange the chops on a hot platter and place a half cinnamon apple on each. Garnish with watercress and insert a sprig of cress in each apple.

Berlin Glitters With Uniforms Of Many Hues

Nazi Storm Troopers Vie With Police and New Aviation Group.

Berlin, (U.P.)—Speaking of uniforms, they are getting more numerous in Berlin streets. Brown and black Nazi uniforms are worn by storm troopers and factory organizations.

Light blue uniforms are sported by the newly founded aviation association; dark-blue uniforms of the police. To these are added a scant sprinkling of the field-gray of the Reichswehr.

Premier Hermann Goering, of Prussia, is entitled to wear all these uniforms. The brown and black uniforms of the party he is, of course, entitled to wear in his capacity as party leader; the light-blue aviators' uniform as Reich Minister of Aviation; the field-gray of the Reichswehr in accordance with his new rank as general of the army.

Books

Hitler's Memoirs and Grading of U. S. Presidents Bring Storms.

The quiet and dignified firm of Houghton Mifflin has brought upon itself an avalanche of letters protesting its publication of Hitler's memoirs—"My Battle"—on October 11. As if that weren't enough, its promotion department prepared a chart grading the character and ability of each of the Presidents of the United States, in connection with Herbert Agar's book, "The People's Choice," which has pulled into the open even more embattled critics.

Theodore Dreiser is suing the Liveright Publishing Co. to restrain sales of his books until they make a new royalty arrangement with him.

"Senator Marlowe's Daughter," Frances Parkinson Keyes' next novel, to be published October 23, was begun in New Hampshire, continued in Puerto Rico, Syria and points in Europe and finished at her home in Alexandria. Its locale jumps about nearly as much.

President Roosevelt's book, "Looking Forward," stands side by side with Hitler's "My Battle" in every book store in Germany. The two volumes are the most popular works there.

"Anthony Adverse" has been sold to Warner Bros. for production. In book form 177,000 copies have extracted $3 each from the public. And Hervey Allen was once a book reviewer!

Island Life.

A novel, "ENTERTAINING THE ISLANDERS," by Struthers Burt. Scribner, $2.50.

In "Entertaining the Islanders" Struthers Burt brings us a thoughtful novel, rich in philosophy, subtle satire and innocuous innuendo. The old problem of finding the road to happiness besets David Banastre, an advertising man in his middle thirties, with a nausea for his generation's careless eroticism and for the sorry state of affairs in his own profession.

Anita Fulton, a young mother with a faithless husband, has a rather desperate attitude toward life. She goes to the Island of St. Birgitta, in the Lesser Antilles of the Cuban Archipelago, to settle the problem of her husband and her life and to get away from the whirling helix of New York society, where she felt so out of place.

Against the background of the primitive unmorality, superstitious fanaticism and the complete indifference of the native islanders to the conventions of marriage, chastity and fidelity, all becomes artificial and futile—the learned philosophy of Julius Wack, sentimental and worldly uncle of Anita; the ecclesiastical seriousness of Monsignor Dorsey, the "thy brother's keeper" attitude of Anita; even the thoughtful and honest seriousness of these two lovers toward the intricacies of life and love.

The book is remarkable in its description. The author not only paints his pictures with interesting and absorbing detail, but instills in them a pulsating reality. His visit to the statue of Christopher Columbus in Santo Domingo, with the Arawak maiden kneeling at its feet, the historical background of these tropical islands, all is interestingly told. The story is a veritable travelogue through the picturesque islands. The climax of the hurricane brings with it an elemental solution of the difficulties of Anita and David. the book is one of Burt's best efforts. GRACE TALBOT.

A Modern Odyssey.

"THE BOOK OF TALBOT," by Violet Clifton. Harcourt, Brace, $3.50.

This book, coming from a source unheralded and unknown, is not a modern work at all. It is the story of a man who left the modern world to spend a life roving and hunting among the primitive peoples in Africa, Siberia and the Polar regions. That does not make it a travel book; the author is no Sven Hedin, no trail-blazer for a geographical society.

What makes the book so remarkable is the uniqueness of its origin. It is the narrative of the life of an Englishman of noble birth who found his island surroundings too narrow and oppressive for a restless and adventurous soul. So, like the hero explorers of an earlier age, he set out to spend his years penetrating far places and "living dangerously." Of superb physique and athletic prowess, he made his way amid a thrilling succession of trials, escapes and triumphs.

He Finds His Mate.

After almost 20 years of wandering, this superman among men at last found his mate. Violet Beauclerk, daughter of the English minister to Peru, had the same passion for primitive nature and adventure that he had. All during the years of their marriage they traveled together, now into inner Persia, now into the African jungle.

Both of them also were people of a strange spiritual and religious intensity. Talbot a lover of music and literature, Violet a poet and a mystic. The aura of Anglo-Catholicism hovered over them and deepened in intensity in the last years of their adventures.

Dies in Jungle.

In 1928, at the age of 60, Talbot Clifton succumbed to disease in inner Africa. His wife minutely gathered together all his diaries and personal papers and from them reconstructed a life of which she actually had known only a third. The book which she made—and this is the most amazing thing of the entire story—follows no literary rules or customs. It is written in a highly poetic, often mystical, style, which leaves vast gaps while giving the most minute details of life in the farthest corners of the earth.

It is not a travel-book. It is not a hero-worshiping biography. It is not a "case history." And it is not a religious memoir. It is a work that defies all conventions, although its theme—that of passionate adventure—harks back over the centuries. WILLIAM HARLAN HALE.

Woodland Becomes Paradise of Gardens, Pools, Playgrounds and Pets at Henry P. Erwin Estate

Arbremont, Secluded as a Country Home, Is Near Heart of Capital!

Homes are so much more than just houses. They reflect the originality, the tastes, the ingenuity of their owners. The following article is one of a series which will describe especially individual Washington homes. The sequence will include large houses, small houses, country houses, town houses, even some interesting apartments, but all homes of distinction. The Washington Post presents this series with the belief that it will be of especial interest to home makers.

As the intricately wrought setting of an old cameo equals the gem itself in interest, so the gardens and woodland of Arbremont, home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, are quite as important as the big-columned Georgian house.

Perhaps more so. For the maze of gardens and the 25 acres of forest webbed with bridle paths are a sort of Eden the Erwins have made to frame the childhood of their three

Going through the Arbremont gardens is a sort of grand tour, with one surprise in color and vista succeeding the other. Very near the house are the more formal arrangements . . . the rose garden and a terrace below, the tulip garden, the lily pool, the box-court with flagged paths at the north front, the evergreen court with its central bed of baby ramblers at the south entrance.

Lilacs in Profusion.

Rambling down one slope is the lilac walk, a grassy lane, sweet in spring with thousands of purple and white lilac blossoms. Farther down the hill is the Japanese garden, the big swimming pool framed in greenery and the dogwood walk, this last a springtime fairyland in pink and white. At the head of one steeply rolling slope is a rustic summer pavilion with matching furniture, the whole set in a clump of tall pines.

Turning back over the hill and nearer to the house is the children's especial domain. A most amusing place, this. It is playground, garden and miniature zoo all rolled up into one.

Swings, slides, exercising bars and the like naturally take up a good deal of space. There is a trellised green playhouse, where the children keep their toys, bicycles and velocipedes. The kennels for the Arbremont collection of dogs are nearby, also big outdoor cages for the children's feathered friends. These include bantam chickens, cooing ring doves, fantastically crested Minorca poultry and a pair of big white cockatoos.

Paradise for Pets.

Nearby are other cages, for guinea pigs and for several big cats. The cats are caged for their own safety, a few experiments in freedom having resulted in their having to take to the trees with the Arbremont dogs in full cry below. Here, too, is a special swimming pool for the dogs, but it's said that these rascals are just as likely to take a header into the lily pond as in their own pool.

Each little girl has a tiny garden of her own, where she sows seeds and raises such easy-to-grow plants as nasturtiums and geraniums. Baby Hal's garden is still, naturally, just the sand box.

Completing the round and coming still nearer to the house, we find the conservatory and the cutting garden. The first is filled with exotics, including a large number of orchids, and has plenty of forcing-beds, where flowers are brought into a succession of blooming periods during the cold months. At every period of the year, winter and summer, the classically-paneled interior of the Arbremont house is the background for great clusters of blossoms. The cutting garden is used during the warmer months to cultivate flowers for the house.

Horses and Poultry.

Farther from the house is another detail of the Arbremont scheme—the paddock, stables, garage and poultry yards. Here are saddle horses for the grown-ups and the children's ponies and upward of 1,000 chickens, ducks and geese. There once was a troop of turkeys, but between the natural delicacy of a young turkey's constitution and the dogs' discovery that turkey meat was pretty good, that experiment had to be given up.

The bridle paths and woodland gardening of Arbremont are a remarkable phase of the estate. The bridle paths are made wide enough for the children's pony cart. With 25 acres of their own, Mr. and Mrs. Erwin feel the children can do a sufficiency of riding and driving without leaving home. Not only do the bridle paths circle throughout the estate, but crossing them in turn is a series of narrower paths centering directly toward the house like the spokes of a wheel. If a horseback rider wearies of his ride, he can turn off on one of these little paths and make a bee-line directly to the house.

Blooming Woodlands.

Each year the gardening of Arbremont goes deeper into the forest in a sort of natural progression. Thousands of narcissus bulbs are planted in the woods each year. Roses blossom in the midst of wild honeysuckle. Forsythias, crepe myrtle and other flowering shrubs come as rainbow surprises in the forest borders.

And all of this is within the city limits of Washington! Arbremont is off Upton street and Linnean avenue at the edge of Rock Creek Park. From its formal gardens you can easily see the Washington Monument.

An idea of the great extent of the gardens can be gleaned from the fact that they hold more than 200 varieties of roses, more than 300 varieties of iris. The classic evergreen court is composed of huge box plants known to be at least 170 years old.

As the flowers in the formal gardens finish their periods of blossoming they are taken out and replaced by others. Thus, when the tulip garden has completed its early summer burst of bloom, the plants are taken out and replaced by equally brilliant pink and lemon-colored lantana and old-fashioned heliotrope.

Add Space Each Year.

Every year it is the plan to make some addition or other to the gardens. Construction of a hillside rock garden is next on the program. This will adjoin the Japanese garden. The waters of a spring will form a little cascade down the slope, filling a lily pool at the base and flowing thence through the woods. A little Japanese tea house will be constructed at the top of the terrace.

The amateur gardener may find plenty of suggestions in Arbremont. One of the best is in the use of cover plants. There are no unpleasant expanses of clay where grass can not find a root, no scrappy lawns under heavy tree shade. These difficult spots are covered with varieties of low-growing greenery that include ivy and myrtle, with its tiny blue flowers; forget-me-not, creeping Jenny and pasaca sandra. Where the stems of high shrubs detract from the effect of massed plantings you are likely to find clumps of vivid azalea.

Artistry Pronounced.

The artistry of the water plantings also is worthy of special study. In the three lily pools the level lines of lily blossoms and water are relieved by higher growing water plants, some with feathery foliage, some with broad, glossy leaves.

In general, the thought of the Arbremont gardening is that a pleasant surprise should await you at every turn. Thus, in the springtime, as you turn the corner of the summer house, you come upon a delicious little crowd of primroses and lilies of the valley looking up at you like small friends met in an unexpected spot. Roaming far in the woods, you find early narcissi under the pine trees.

While color and a profusion of blossoms are the rule at Arbremont, there are two exceptions. One is the box-court, where the dark green of these ancient plants form a great square unrelieved except for walks of heavy flags placed wide apart with the grass growing between. The other is the swimming pool, where the glitter of the water is framed in high greenery, mostly evergreens. But even here a few azaleas add a dash of scarlet in the spring.

Washer Mishaps Make Monday a Blue Day

Portland, Oreg. (AP).—"Blue Monday" was a reality in Portland. Before the day was over hospitals had treated three persons, two of them under 4, for injuries suffered when their hands were caught in the wringers of washing machines.

Simple Trick Saves Nails.

When gardening, painting or housecleaning, the fingernails may be kept clean by first scraping them over with a piece of common soap and allowing the soap to remain on the nails and under the tips. Wash off the soap when the "rough work" is finished and you will find the nails exquisitely clean.

Tartar Cleans Rust.

Iron rust may be removed from delicate fabrics by covering the spot thickly with cream of tartar, then twisting the cloth to keep the mixture over the spot. Place in a pan of cold water and heat the water gradually, over open flame, to the boiling point.

Mary Rogers Shies at Using Dad's Name to Win in Pictures

Hollywood (AP).—Will Rogers' Mary is looking for a job, but not as Will Rogers' daughter.

The 18-year-old finishing school graduate, who made her debut in a motion picture under the name of Mary Howard, says she has made up her mind definitely to embark on a film career. In preparation for this, she intends to serve a short apprenticeship on the stage.

Mary now is taking voice and dramatic lessons and, when she finds the "right" stock company, she intends to go East to join it.

"I need some experience on the stage," she said. "Every one I've talked to agrees to that. Not soon, but within two or three months, after I've had more dramatic coaching, I want to join a stock company that changes its bill every week.

"It will have to be a company that will hire me because it wants some one to play small roles, not because of who I am.

"I think it would be a mistake for me to cash in on dad's name. And I'll have to be careful not to become associated with some manager who is looking for an opportunity to get some publicity."

Rogers, being a dutiful father, seems to have been thoroughly won over by his attractive daughter. Says he:

"Now, as to me having any objections, I'm in the show business, and so's my good friend, Fred Stone. All of Fred's family have been educated for the stage and probably will get into pictures. So, why not Mary? I believe in training for what you're going to do, no matter what it is. Mary does, too."

Where Rain Is Falling.

By Katherine W. Smith.

This night
Swift silvered rain,
That falls and lightly lashes
My face, is cool . . . indifferent . . .

I might
Have known that pain
Had bright stiletto flashes
Of anger to your eyes. Too spent

To fight,
I would remain
Where I can feel the splashes

Modern Joan Here, Waving Olive Branch, Not a Sword

College Girl, 20, Digs for Data in Capital. Then in Ancient Auto Will Sally Forth to Preach Gospel of Peace to U. S.

The name is Mona Cutler. Her age is 20. The charger she rides, while 5 years old, can scarce be termed fiery, though it occasionally snorts. It's a donated touring car.

Her crusade is the cause of peace. Her legion the youth of America, disillusioned World War veterans and women whose hearts have been broken by the spectacle of international, wholesale human slaughter.

Dr. Woolley's Protege.

Her title, Peace Counselor of the Youth Movement for World Recovery. She was nominated for the unique post by Dr. Mary Woolley, president of Mount Holyoke College and only woman delegate from the United States to the World Disarmament Conference at Geneva. Dr. Woolley's attention was attracted to the girl through her campus activities on behalf of peace.

Financed by student organization and administrative funds of 10 Eastern colleges and through donations from private citizens, she will devote the coming year to launching campus projects for furthering educational activities on behalf of world peace and organizing political units in Congressional districts to work for it.

"I am not sure I will be able to finish out the year. It depends on how the money comes in and whether the car holds up," she said yesterday with smiling seriousness.

Sifts Record Here.

Be that as it may, she is spending this week doing research work in the library of the National Council for Prevention of War, 532 Seventeenth street northwest.

When she has equipped herself with what she terms "a factual basis of appeal for disarmament and world peace," which she expects to have accomplished by the end of the week, she will set forth in the donated car on a prearranged itinerary.

Instituitons of higher learning which have requested her assistance in handling world peace projects are Bernard College and Columbia University, in New York; Connecticut State College for Women, New London; Pembroke College in Brown University, Providence, R. I.; Wellesley College, Mass.; Radcliffe College in Harvard University, Combridge; Mount Holyoke College; Smith College, Northampton, Mass.; Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and Skidmore College, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Miss Cutler is brown-eyed and curly-haired. She seems older than her 20 years and, while intensely serious about her work, is no blue stocking.

Of Mayflower Stock.

Facts of lighter vein balance the facts that her ancestors came to America in the Mayflower; that she was editor of the Mount Holyoke campus newspaper during her junior and senior years; that she was president of the college Peace Club, and one of 108 "pivot" student peace workers of the United States; member of "Black Stick," honorary literary society, and devoted the summer to social work among slum children of New York City.

She excels in tennis, swimming, soccer and basket ball; delights in playing the piano and in dancing, and is engaged to be married.

The blushing confusion with which she reluctantly admitted the last item contrasted engagingly with her casually authoritative discussion of peace activities.

Holds Marriage No Handicap.

When asked if her crusade for world peace might not be seriously interfered with by marriage, she protested:

"After all, work for world peace must begin in the home. The man I expect to marry shares my opinion in this regard."

She believes that 50 per cent of the college youth of America would refuse to take up arms today, in the event the United States launched aggressive warfare.

"Thirty-nine per cent of the college students in this country, in a vote polled by student newspapers this past year, voted they would under no condition fight in any war which the United States might enter.

"Three thousand other students voted they would not fight unless the shores of the United States were invaded.

"That sentiment, honestly and frankly pledged, amounts to anarchy, I suppose. But with thousands avowed objectors to war, most of the sting would be removed from the accusation of slacker should another war break out.

"Enlightened young people today don't want to fight. They have more interesting things to do. They want to study, to teach, to write, to marry, to live.

"They know that the next war, if it comes, will last about two hours. Everybody will be dead by that time of poison gas and other appalling devices of modern aggressive warfare."

"With more young people going to college today than ever before, what college men and women are thinking may be taken as a pretty accurate reflection of what all young people feel," Miss Cutler continued.

"And what college women, and all women, feel about war is certainly important. If women won't mobilize as nurses, as bandage makers and sweater knitters, it's just as serious as lack of soldiers on the battle fronts."

Car Given to Her.

The car which will carry Miss Cutler forth on her crusade was given her by an elderly Boston woman, who heard with approval her exposition of the sentiments of the younger generation with regard to war and peace.

"She seemed surprised to learn that the youth of today is engrossed with serious matters; not altogether taken up with diversion and dress," Miss Cutler said. "With tears in her eyes she urged me to take her car and use it to work for world peace."

Parallel with this encounter was the action of a World War veteran, who learned by chance of her plan for peace work this winter. A visitor to the slum children's camp in Fairfield, Conn., he thrust a $50 bill into Miss Cutler's hand and urged her at all costs to continue furthering education for world peace.

"'The older generations made a mess of things,' he told me. 'The generation ahead of yours was wrecked by the emotional aftermath of the World War. The hope of the world is in the youth of today.'"

Rub Serge With Emery Cloth to Remove Shine

All who have worn serge garments are familiar with its one disagreeable quality—the mirror-like shine resulting from wear. Assiduous washing, sponging and pressing fail to remove the shine. Try this plan. Wash or clean the garment thoroughly; take a piece of emery cloth and scrub the shiny portion lightly. You will find the shiny look entirely disappears. When pressed, the garment should look like new.

Drop Marble Into Pot, Contents Will Not Burn

When cooking milk porridges, custards, or sauces, the chore of constant stirring can be greatly simplified. Sterilize a large, smooth marble and drop it into the mixture when it is put on to boil. The marble, agitated by the boiling, automatically stirs the mixture, and, moreover, prevents any chance of burning.

Boulder City Gets a School; Pupils Grieve

Dispute Over Taxes Settled, Blasting Youngsters' Hope of Carefree Year.

Boulder City, Nev., Oct. 4 (AP).—Six hundred and fifty children in this Government-owned city are back at their school desks, three weeks late and disillusioned in any hope they may have held for a studyless year.

When all other Nevada schools opened this fall, it appeared the legal difficulties might prolong the summer vacation of the Boulder City boys and girls indefinitely.

Last year they attended a Government school under the jurisdiction of the city manager, acting for the U. S. Bureau of Reclamation. They were taught by teachers paid by contractors engaged in building the huge Boulder Dam.

The State of Nevada and Clark County, however, sought to collect personal property taxes in the Federal reservation created by the Government for the dam project and the construction city.

The controversy went through the courts and Judge Frank H. Norcross, of the Nevada District Federal Court, found for the State. Rather than appeal, the contractors offered a compromise tax payment which was accepted by the county commissioners.

It then was believed the State would immediately take over operation of the Boulder City school system, but because the actual tax payment will not be made until November, State school authorities demurred at setting up the Boulder City school district. Other reasons given were that the school buildings were owned by the Government, and no definite permission for State use was forthcoming. The school funds also were at a low ebb.

Just when the situation looked darkest (or brightest, for those who prefer vacation to reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic) the contractors came forward with an offer to provide an emergency loan. A board of trustees was named, and State schools in the Federal reservation got under way.

A staff of 16 teachers is employed to tutor the 650 grade-school pupils here. The 130 pupils of high-school age attend classes in Las Vegas, nearby.

U. S. Installs Closer Check Of Retail Code

New Service Will Trace Movements of Goods to Consumers.

New system of data to reflect weekly fluctuations of retail trade was announced yesterday by Dr. Willard L. Thorp, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The new index will be based on automobile sales, groceries, variety goods and general merchandise sales in small towns. Other classes of goods will be added as the service develops.

The purpose primarily is to trace the movement of goods in consumer channels, as a quick check upon the NRA program. The system will be maintained, however, as a permanent factor in the Federal Government's statistical services.

The new plan has been approved by the Central Statistical Board, established two months ago by President Roosevelt to coordinate all such services.

At present the Federal Reserve Board's monthly reports on big-city department store sales is the only governmental index available on retail trade. Reports will be published within ten days after the end of each month.

"It is expected the new indices will be a helpful guide to changing trends in the movement of consumer goods, indicating from month to month the effect of varying economic policies and practices," Thorpe said.

Wallace Asks For Rejection Of Sugar Pact

President Will Be Urged Today to Disapprove Stabilization Plan.

(Copyright, 1933, Associated Press.)

Rejection of the proposed sugar stabilization agreement in its present form will be recommended to President Roosevelt today by Secretary Wallace.

This was indicated definitely yesterday as Wallace continued study of the pact which would fix quotas to be supplied to the American market from principal producing areas. These include domestic beet and cane, the Philippines, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, Cuba, and the Virgin Islands.

He was said to believe such an agreement would result in heavy increases to American consumers.

It was understood an alternative set of proposals might be presented by Wallace. It was considered possible, in view of the long and fruitless negotiations, that all efforts toward an agreement might be dropped by the Farm Administration.

The formula provided in the agreement for arriving at the price to be paid for sugar in America has been subjected to severe criticism. Estimates have been made that it would raise cost to domestic consumers by $40,000,000, or more, annually.

Trespass Mishaps Shown Increasing

10 Per Cent Upswing in Deaths in 1933.

Accidents to wandering trespassers on railroad property are on the increase despite that ordinary accidents have decreased, the American Railway Association heard yesterday.

People "riding the rails" during the last four years have given an upswing to the number of deaths on railroad property. A 10 per cent increase was reported for the first six months of this year over 1932. Most deaths occurred on the right of way.

Fatalities to nontrespassers fell, over the four-year period, nearly 47 per cent. In 1932 of the total deaths slightly more than 50 per cent were those of trespassers.

37,000 Forestry Youths Get Jobs

Average of 800 Leaving Camps Daily.

Since the call by President Roosevelt early in September for a new contingent of unemployed youths to enter the Civilian Conservation Corps, an average of 800 have left the camps daily to return to civil life, and of this number 37,000 are reported to have found jobs.

Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, yesterday cited the return of these men as a barometer by which employment may be gauged. Those discharged were required to furnish proof they had gained employment outside of the camps.

50,000 Federal Workers Give Living Costs in Answers.

More Than 71 Per Cent of Workers Return Questionnaire.

More than 71 per cent of the questionnaires sent to Government workers as the first step in setting up new cost-of-living standards have been returned, the Department of Labor said yesterday.

Between 65,000 and 70,000 blanks were distributed to Government workers in Washington, and between 45,000 and 50,000 have been sent back.

The study of the returned questionnaires is being expedited by Dr. Isador Lubin, chief of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The new cost-of-living figures, on which depend the continuance of the Federal pay cut, are due November 15. Before that a typical group of workers must be selected for study. Even after this, the new expenditures to be considered in the index must be chosen.

Labor Shuts Door On "Relief" Group

Weinstock and Delegation Denied Admittance.

Frustrated in an attempt to gain admission for himself and a group of 20 self-styled representatives of the "committee for unemployment insurance and relief" to the American Federation of Labor convention in the Willard Hotel yesterday, Louis Weinstock, labor organizer, left for New York last night.

Detectives led Weinstock and his group away peacefully at the morning session.

The group presented to E. J. Roche, at the door, what Weinstock called "credentials entitling us to admission." When Roche gave these to President William Green, presiding, they were rejected on the ground that the credentials were not similar to those required of other convention delegates and the unions they claimed to represent already had delegates on the floor.

Weinstock, as officers led him to the elevator, threw out a handful of typewritten statements explaining the aim of his group.

Johnson Finds "Flat Wallet" Period Routed

Urges Manufacturers to Aid "Buy Now" Drive by Advertising.

(Associated Press.)

A declaration that the "flat wallet era" is over, was made by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson, in a letter, made public yesterday, urging leading manufacturers and advertisers to participate actively in the "Now-is-the-time-to-buy" campaign, starting next week.

Presenting statistics to show mounting employment and pay rolls, he added, "We believe the opportune moment is at hand for American industry to bend every effort toward increased sales."

Johnson remained in New York for additional conferences and was directed back today, after which reorganization plans he had discussed with President Roosevelt will be put into operation.

The NRA Consumers Advisory Board announced plans to obtain Government action to measure quality standard of codes and analyze cost of living and earning power levels for a definite guide against profiteering.

Johnson's letter said in part:

"American industry must help the public to find the goods it needs. The modern method is advertising. The American public looks to advertising for news of good merchandise and good values.

"In order to increase sales at the present moment, we believe that two courses of action are absolutely essential. They are: First, give the public attractive, up-to-date merchandise, fairly priced, and second, aggressively promote your products to the public."

Advertising, both by national firms and by distributors and retailers, is the chief instrument the administration has chosen to push the buying campaign.

Lumber Trade Will Not Set Selling Price

Industry Plans to Demand Return Equal Only to Cost Production.

Assurance that the lumber industry will not fix the selling price of its products, but will demand a return equal only to "cost production" was given last night as the industry's cost advisory committee met in the Mayflower Hotel.

Computation of the average price for each item operators must receive to pay code wages and shorten hours will be made by the committee, but no profit margin will be set, C. Arthur Bruce said at the opening session yesterday. Figures reached for production costs will be the minimum at which lumber or any forest product may be sold legally or offered for sale, he said.

For any return above cost of production operators must rely on the law of supply and demand, but the Lumber Code Authority will not permit any producer to sell under the minimum price set to the detriment of the industry as a whole.

Members of the cost finding committee were urged to "spare no effort" to reach an exact conclusion as to what figures represent cost production.

Government Gets Gun of Kidnaper

Express Company to Make Gift of Bates' Weapon.

A submachine gun, allegedly taken from Albert Bates, convicted Urschel kidnaper, will be presented to the Government and not sold at auction. The American Express Co. announced this change in plans yesterday.

It had been announced previously the express company would sell the gun to satisfy a judgment against Bates.

Assistant Attorney-General William Stanley, at the instance of Attorney General Cummings, communicated with express company officials and obtained their cooperation in keeping the gun from falling into private hands. The company will conduct the sale, but will buy the gun itself and turn it over to agents of the U. S. Division of Investigation.

Three Billions To Free Bank Deposits Asked

Lawmaker Asks Treasury to Trade U. S. Bonds With Liquidators.

A proposal to free deposits in closed banks through issuance of $3,000,000,000 new currency was submitted yesterday to Walter Cummings, executive assistant to Secretary Woodin, by Representative William L. Feisinger, of Ohio.

Feisinger's plan was outlined in a front-page editorial in the Cleveland News, citing that since the bank holiday 2,575 banks, with deposits of $1,765,000,000, failed to reopen.

"The R. F. C. should take over assets of all banks," the editorial proposed. "The R. F. C., on its own note to the Treasury, should buy Government bonds to the extent of $3,000,000,000. It should trade these bonds to the liquidators, conservators and receivers of the closed banks, National or State, for their entire assets.

"These bonds should be turned back by the liquidators to the Treasury, and in exchange the liquidators should receive the $3,000,000,000 in currency, authorized by the Thomas act. The bonds would at once be retired by the United States Treasury and the R. F. C. note canceled."

Feisinger put the idea before Budget Director Douglas. He was told the administration is already evolving new plans for release of frozen bank deposits without resort to currency inflation methods.

Strike Is Ended In Tribute To Gompers

Labor Makes Truce to Complete Work on Statue.

Capital and labor declared a truce yesterday in deference to the memory of Samuel Gompers and work was continued on the bronze statue of the trade union champion which will be unveiled Saturday.

Encountering unyielding opposition to their demands for a two-shift, four-hour day, ironworkers returned to the job of assembling the memorial on a one-shift, eight-hour basis. By agreement with General Bronze Corporation, they will resume work today on that company's five Government building jobs.

Installation of the memorial at Tenth street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, was interrupted Tuesday.

Adopted to spread work, the split shift has been accepted by several contractors here, according to Leslie L. Myers, business agent for the ironworkers.

The plan is in effect, he said, at the Archives Building, Central Heating Plant, Supreme Court, City Postoffice addition, St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Potomac Electric Power Co., Treasury vaults and Agriculture Building.

Work on the Interstate Commerce Commission-Labor Buildings has been suspended since September 15, due to a jurisdictional dispute between carpenters and ironworkers over installation of radiator inclosures.

7,000 in Line For 500 Jobs

Men Wait Through Night in Hopes of Landing Navy Yard Work.

An all-night wait for a crowd which grew to at least 7,000 men yesterday resulted in the lucky first 500 in line getting application blanks for jobs as common laborers in the navy yards. The others were turned away after a fruitless wait in which police several times were forced to round up stragglers.

At 10 o'clock Tuesday night the first applicants appeared outside the gate at Ninth and M streets southeast. Cushions and blankets, in an attempt to make the wait more comfortable, were brought along by many of the men. By 9 o'clock 50 policemen were on hand to take care of the crowd which was in double lines four blocks long.

A few minutes later the first 500 in line had application blanks and the others had been turned away. These successful applicants will form a new eligibility list for common laborers under Civil Service.

It was not stated what projects other than the usual navy yard construction will employ the men. Successful applicants must be able to shoulder a 125-pound sack and will receive 43 to 53 cents per hour less the 15 per cent economy pay cut.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Jaundice—What of It?

A new born babe is a pink proposition. The skin is thin, and within it there is plenty of good red blood. The bleaching out process starts within a few days. First there develops a faint yellowish hue rather easily seen in good daylight. Within a week, as a rule, this jaundice passes away and the child appears to be something near the original pink color, but the lobster hue of the first day is never fully reached thereafter. After that comes a slow, long-drawn out bleaching process which is apt to end in a marked pallor.

This story deals with the jaundice which is so apt to appear in the first week of life. This jaundice may be any one of several kinds, some of which are just part of nature's schedule, while others are matters of great importance.

Human blood always contains a certain amount of a yellow pigment called bilirubin, derived from the wearing out of hemoglobin. In a baby two or three days old this coloring matter is about six times as plentiful as it is in the blood of a normal adult. At the same time there is a drop in the percentage of hemoglobin and a change in the character of the blood cells. All of this is because the blood of an unborn child is made in a slightly different way and has slightly different work to do. When birth comes some readjustments are needed. This brings about some jaundice. A baby about three days old that has a little yellowing of the skin and eyes, but feels well, acts as though he were not in trouble, and has no fever, no enlargement of the liver nor of the spleen—such a baby is all right. The jaundice is just a part of the program. No treatment is called for. So much for what might be called normal jaundice in young babies.

Unfortunately there are several kinds of jaundice in such babies that are not to be disregarded. What is the baby's family history as regards serious jaundice in the babies? Has the mother lost other children from jaundice? Is the baby's liver enlarged? If so, that is a bad sign. Is the spleen enlarged? Another bad sign. Is the child having much fever? An examination of the blood sometimes shows indications of a serious disease.

If the jaundice is of the serious sort the physician must get busy. Whether or not the baby is to live depends very much on how quickly he thinks and acts. The best single procedure is transfusion.

Radio Waves and Ripples

N. B. C. is taking Washington's William Hard off the air.

The "Back of the News" man quits October 18 after nearly three years of news analyzing from National studios here.

No reason for his retirement was advanced by the bosses, nor were they prepared to announce his successor.

Hard is known to have worked up a considerable radio following. Aircasters have not counted him out by any means. Some there are in these parts who would be glad to put him in front of one of their microphones, it was said.

S. P. B. Mais, the British Broadcasting Corporation's "Columbus" yesterday discovered Arlington and Mount Vernon.

Mais has come to this country to report his discoveries to British and American listeners over N. B. C. and B. B. C. networks, beginning at Lexington, Ky., October 13.

Already he has found what he claims to be a sure way of getting rid of people. His method is to ask them to recommend a book, particularly one on American history.

"They leave right away to find it," he contends, "and never come back."

And another story of departing microphoners is that Jack Price and Stanley Simmons, Sylvester Suds and Montclair Bubbles to WRC's Manhattan Monday Revue listeners, have followed former N. B. C. Assistant Manager Herluf Provensen to Erie, Pa.

They gagged their last gag from WRC last Monday. Provensen brought them to Capital airways in the first place, so the WRC minds think their going to the Erie studio is all right.

Whitecaps.

WOL—Greek Byzantine Ensemble, 7 p. m.; Blue Danube Ensemble, 9:15 p. m.; Wrestling matches, 9:30 p. m. WRC—Twenty Fingers of Harmony, 7 p. m.; Fleischmann Hour, 8 p. m.; Jolson and Whiteman, 10 p. m. WMAL—London Terrace Orchestra, 6:06 p. m.; Hands Across the Border, 10 p. m.; Echoes of the Palisades, 10:30 p. m. WJSV—McCravy Brothers, 6:45 p. m.; Just Plain Bill, 7:15 p. m.; Crosby, Barrymore, Downey, 9:15 p. m.

One of these days Ted Ostenkamp is going to invite Capital announcers to a spelling bee for WOL microphoning. People who write things like this for the papers, known jocularly among the studio trade as "radio editors," already have been asked, possibly to make certain the desired informal effect is maintained.

Incidentally, WOL minds aren't entirely satisfied with the Ed Wynn programs. But they aren't saying anything about it, wanting to give the new network a chance to rectify its mistakes in its own way.

The National City Christian Church neighborhood got tired of hearing chimes as late as 10:45 p. m. even for the Children's Hospital furnace. They told church officials and WJSV as much. Now organ chimes are being used. They're better for microphoning, anyway.

Kate Smith was the last furnace fund booster, which recalls the song girl's efforts to be a nurse some years back.

Lawrence W. Corbett, grand knight of Alexandria's Fitzgerald Council, Knights of Columbus, will be the WJSV Columbus Day observer, radiating a talk from the Potomac transmitter, October 12, at 7:30 p. m.

WJSV is worried about Ted Husing broadcasting his Leon Belasco program here tonight instead of in New York. The hands hope they won't be expected to produce the usual Husing sound effects—roaring crowds, &c. They haven't things for noises like that. Husing comes to the Capital for the world series radioings.

N. B. C.'s series radiocaster, Graham McNamee, is hale and hearty once more, ready to do his scheduled bit at the games.

This should be as good a place as any for reporting on the WRC health talks. They're transcriptions (phonograph records) made by New York's physician-senator, Royal Copeland, and Washington's Dr. Wynn for 13 weeks of daily broadcasting at 10:15 a. m. and 2 p. m.

The WMAL heads listened to 16 hillbilly acts the other night before accepting a Pittsburgh show they had been considering pretty seriously. Starting Monday, the Pittsburgh hillbillies go on the air five times a week for WMAL, Baltimore's WCAO and Crazy Crystals. The heads have given them six weeks in which to make good, or else * * * which means at least two sets of local boys still have a look-in.

WRC keeps right on employing talent for its "Jewels of Eventide." Elsie Craft Hurley, lyric soprano about the N. B. C. studios for several years, is the latest.

And for the benefit of visiting auto dealers conventioning at the Shoreham, the "King of the Highway" show, 6:30 p. m. tomorrow, has received another 15 minutes.

Dr. Frederick C. Howe, Department of Agriculture, and Julia K. Jaffrey, Federation of Women's Clubs, collaborate in "Your Money's Worth of Canned Goods," on WMAL at 5 o'clock tonight.

Ripples.

A Press Building elevator solely is responsible for Violet Wachter's reaching WRC in time for her "Doors" broadcast Tuesday night . . . with a minute to go he took her straight to the twelfth floor, letting the other passengres out later . . . "What Parents Expect of College" will be the Dr. William Allen Wilbur speech for George Washington University tonight at 8:30, WMAL . . . The D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs comes back with its weekly microphoning tomorrow . . . President Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, WRC, 11 a. m. . . . Washington's Meredith Smith and Paul Murphy have received the leads for "Millions and Matrimony," WOL tomorrow night.

Elizabeth Love (right), plays Betty Graham for Columbia's "Roses and Drums." She wears the period dress for benefit of the Sunday evening broadcast audiences. Another radiodrama actress is Ruth Russell, currently Nancy in "Just Plain Bill."

Tubercular Cycle Upturn Forecast

Disease to Gain During Next 100 Years.

Kansas City, Oct. 4 (AP).—Tuberculosis runs in cycles of 200 years, varying from weak to strong, Dr. Kendall Emerson, director of the National Tuberculosis Association, said here today.

This growth in intensity through a long period of time is similar to the ebb and flow of epidemics of influenza, he told the Southwest Clinic.

Since 1850, he said, the cycle has been on the downgrade. But the coming 100 years will show a gradual upturn.

Ruling Awaited On Conciliation

Four U. S. Departments Will Be Affected in Proposed Move.

Creation of committees in four Government departments to hear disputes between employes and supervisors await decommendations to be made soon.

Departments concerned are Labor, State, Agriculture and Commerce.

A committee studying the proposal for a conciliation body in the Labor Department has asked the Civil Service Commission to report on procedure recommended by other departmental committees.

A conciliation committee as recommended by the Civil Service Commission appears likely for the Department of Commerce.

Freed Convict Seized in Loan Firm Robbery

Woman Causes Capture as He Flees When She Gives Alarm.

Herman Hamilton, 35, alleged to have held up Mrs. Maurine Weir, cashier of the State Loan Co., Mount Rainier, was held for the grand jury last night.

Justice of the Peace Robert Joyce set bond at $5,000. This was not furnished.

Captured earlier in the day by Police Chief Eugene Plummer, Hamilton was identified by Justice Department files as a former Missouri Penitentiary convict. He was paroled recently after serving five years of a 45-year term for robbery.

Mrs. Weir was alone in her office when the neatly-dressed man entered and asked for information regarding a loan.

Told the loan was impossible, he drew a revolver and declared he would help himself. He seized the contents of the cash drawer. Then he forced Mrs. Weir to open the safe, but no cash was available.

Thomas E. Sailor, 3120 Dumbarton avenue northwest, entered. The robber stood silent with the gun in his pocket. Mrs. Weir attempted to scribble a message for help on the customer's credit book. But her nerves failed.

The telephone rang. It was a credit company.

"Help, I'm being robbed," she screamed.

The bandit fled.

Following him to the door, she shouted for help. Police Chief Plummer, directing traffic a block away, chased him.

Within two blocks he caught the man. At county police headquarters, Hyattsville, the suspect gave several names and addresses. Several rolls of sticking tape were found in his pockets.

Bank Robber and Victim

Mrs. Maurine Weir, cashier of the State Loan Co., Mount Rainier, Md., is shown with Herman Hamilton, captured yesterday when her screams brought police.

Feast

Hospitality of Chinese Surfeited Missionary.

Feeding one's guest is an old Chinese custom, but it destroyed his appetite for hard-boiled eggs and sponge cake for months, the Rev. J. P. Anderson, a missionary, told leaders in the world's general conference of Seventh Day Adventists in session at Takoma Park yesterday.

Dr. Anderson was served these delicacies in 15 native homes in a single day, he said. They were his favorite foods, but they are no longer, he added.

He described adventures with bandit armies, when he, his wife and his children were forced to live on bread and water behind basement walls for days while armies clashed behind his home. He plans to return to China as soon as his furlough ends.

Fairfax Board Bans Proposed Nudist Colony

County Blocks Attempt to Start Club Near Herndon.

Nudists will not be permitted in Fairfax County, the Board of Supervisors told a group of men and women, against whom a complaint had been lodged, charging they were endeavoring to organize a nudist camp near Herndon.

The complaint followed confirmation of a report that nudist activities were observed on a tract bordering Lawyer's road, between Vienna and Hunter's Station.

Investigation led to complaints. The supervisors laid down the law to George A. Rossman and two women companions. Rossman insisted the organization, known as the "Green Forest Club," proposed to provide members with facilities for obtaining benefits of "sunlight, fresh air, water, and exercise." The Green Foresters, Rossman held, would not countenance exhibitionism, indecent exposure, obscenity or immorality.

The campers suggested they might take the matter to a court, but in the meantime the Board of Supervisors is contemplating an ordinance forbidding folks to go undraped.

Fielding Lewis, brother-in-law of George Washington, to a tobacco manufacturing promoter, today was given to the custody of the Kenmore Association. It was offered for sale to the Kenmore Association on the day Mr. and Mrs. Daingerfield Lewis, of Hewlett, Long Island, descendents of Col. Lewis, chanced to be visiting Kenmore. The association having lacked funds to purchase the relic, the Long Island Lewises offered to buy and donate it to Kenmore.

Here is the letter:

SIR:

I have your favour of the 20th inst., wherein you inform me that the Tobacco Engine should be sent up to me by the first Opportunity. I could not be more particular in my last as to what part of the Articles I should want, as I am almost a stranger to the business of manufacturing of Tobacco and consequently cannot know what will be necessary until I see the Articles. I confess I do not immagine I shall have occasion for the whole as its very probably there is Tools for carrying on every branch of that business, for I only propose cutting Tobacco. Therefore What are necessary for making Snuff or trimming I shall have no occasion to buy.

I am your most Humble Servant

Stocks Stage Best Rally in Several Weeks

Rise Averages 4-9 Points on Larger Sale of 2,127,485 Shares.

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Helped by a favorable technical position, stocks swung into their best rally in several weeks today and closed with general net gains of 2 to 8 points for the more active favorites. The average rise, 4.9 points, was the largest since July 24 when the market was recovering from its big midsummer slump.

Short covering gave prices a fair boost during the morning and early afternoon, but the best push occurred in the final half hour when buying became active and closing prices were virtually the day's highest. Stock sales totaled 2,127,485 shares.

Wall street accepted midweek trade statistics as indicating that business was at least holding its own and that perhaps things were some better than recent appraisals.

Views on Dollar.

Also, the belief that advocates of the "honest dollar" would eventually carry the day gained ground; traders who recently had sold because they looked for no currency inflation seemed ready to buy stocks on what they took to be the prospects for an orthodox handling of monetary matters.

Recent declines had given the market a larger short interest and with spirits rising and offerings light prices advanced readily when buyers appeared.

Gains of 2 to 3 points were made by such issues as U. S. Steel, Bethlehem Steel, American Telephone, General Motors, American Smelting, Consolidated Gas, North American, Montgomery Ward, Lackawanna, Pennsylvania, Peoples Gas, Harvester, Goodyear, Great Western Sugar and Woolworth, among others. Du Pont, Case, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical, U. S. Smelting, Eastman Kodak, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, New York Central, Illinois Central and Chrysler were up 3 to 4 or more, while Union Pacific jumped 8 and National Distillers about 7. Homestake soared 17¾, to 370.

Commodities Are Firm.

Minor commodity markets were fairly firm. Their performance, together with the rise in stocks, accompanied an improvement in dollar exchange, so that the general trend of speculative prices was the reverse of what was once expected when our currency took a brace. Bankers pointed out that sound money would be basically bullish and that business confidence be strengthened by such a policy, even though no immediate decision for returning to the gold standard was reached.

Iron Age placed steel production a point higher at 42 per cent of capacity, but said labor difficulties in plants of both producers and users of steel threatened to "impede the progress of the industry." Operating rates are still being aided by specifications against old contracts, but fourth-quarter orders have been sizable. Electric power output last week was higher than a week ago and the gain over 1932 widened.

Freight loadings, on the basis of first reports, retained, in the week ended September 30, an improvement over last year, though the rise still appeared to be narrowing. Automobile production in September was 20 per cent under August, a seasonal slump, but was 190 per cent better than September, 1932.

Begging Banks to Borrow

Getting New York Institutions To Lead Will Not Fool Public

By Ralph West Robey.

Efforts of the administration to get banks to borrow from it for the purpose of extending more credit apparently at present are being largely concentrated in New York.

The reason for this is that it is felt if the large financial district banks of that city will accept these loans, the public will come to regard such borrowing as perfectly safe and not an indication of weakness on the part of the borrowing institution. In other words, it is held that such action by New York banks will make the rank and file view these loans as part of the credit expansion drive, rather than as rescue parties. It seems to me that the administration, in taking this view, is being a bit naive.

For weeks, now, the American public has been bombarded from Washington with criticism of the banks for not lending more. We have been told time after time that the banks are sitting, in effect, with their vaults full of money and refusing to let the business men borrow it; that they have carried the idea of liquidity to the point of absurdity through their accumulation of Government obligations; that the entire recovery program is being endangered because they have set such high standards for credit risks that scarcely any borrowers can meet them; that, in short, the banks today are the greatest hoarders in the country.

If Charges are True Banks Are Not in Need of Loans.

If this line of argument is true, it is evident the banks have no occasion to borrow from the Government through selling preferred stock to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Either a bank has a surplus lending power, in which case it can make more loans without outside aid, or it is "loaned-up," and can not with justness be accused of being a hoarder. The Government, if it desires, obviously can take its choice as to which of these conditions it desires to maintain to the public is the actual situation.

One would think, however, that it would be hesitant about trying to convince the public that both are true at the same time, as apparently it is trying to do in getting the New York banks to borrow.

The facts of the matter are, of course, that some banks are overburdened with excess lending power while others are leading a hand-to-mouth existence. The problem of getting Government capital into banks, thus, does not concern the banking system as a whole, but individual institutions. This is equally true in the case of the charges that banks should lend more freely. The Government, however, has failed to make this distinction clear in the statements it has presented to the public. In these statements it has been "the batnks" that are hoarders, and "the banks" that now should borrow from the Government.

Impossible to Tell How Much Public Has Believed.

Just how far the public has accepted such statements at their face value is problematical. There is little doubt, however, that the New York institutions have received in the public mind at least their full share of the blame of being hoarders. Suppose, therefore, that the New York banks do get together and borrow from the Government. This should convince anyone that when other banks borrow it is not an indication of weakness and that the Government is out on a rescue party.

In other words, after what the public has been told about the condition of the banks and their hoarding propensities, and because the public almost unconsciously thinks of anything bad about "the banks" being worst in New York, it would appear reasonable to expect the rank and file to interpret any borrowing by New York institutions as a hoax. Instead of creating confidence, it would be more logical for it to cause distrust.

This does not mean that getting a few large banks to take such loans would not fool any one. On the contrary, probably vast numbers would be fooled. They would not be the people, however, whose deposits are the backbone of our banking system. Quite aside from this, too, it is hard to understand how any one can urge a program the success of which admittedly rests upon pulling the wool over the eyes of the public.

Bonds Record Price Jumps In Heavy Sales

Secondary Rails Demanded as Trading Rises to $10,557,000.

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Bonds, apparently encouraged by the brisk rally in stocks, registered considerable improvement today both in prices and trading volume.

Sales totaled $10,570,000, par value, nearly $3,000,000 ahead of yesterday's session, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans advanced three-tenths of a point.

Actual news that might have motivated senior securities was scarce. Electric power output showed more of a percentage increase over last year than in the previous week and merchandise car loadings were reported holding up well despite the apparent sag in other shipments. Steel production, notwithstanding labor troubles, showed a slight gain in some districts.

Rail liens, especially those of the secondary category, were in demand. Some carriers gained as much as 2 or more points.

Utilities and industrials were up fractionally to around 3 points.

United States Government bonds were steady to firm. Obligations of Berlin, Germany; Irish Free State, Italy and Japan gained 1 to more than 3 points. Gold bonds of Dutch East Indies, France and Switzerland were a trifle heavy. Buenos Aires 6s of 1960 dropped 17¼ points and the 6½s of 1961 lost 4½.

Low-Price Stocks May Be Margined

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—New York Stock Exchange member firms will be permitted hereafter to accept margin accounts in stocks selling at less than $5 a share, under a ruling of the exchange announced today. The new arrangement will not apply to stocks selling below this figure if they are unacceptable to the banks as collateral for call loans.

Modification of the margin rules was authorized by the exchange, it was said, in order to lift a discrimination against stocks, which, in spite of their low value, were considered good loan collateral by the banks.

The action rescinds a rule adopted by the exchange early in August, which stated that "no" value shall be allowed on any stock selling at less than $5 a share, or any bond at less than 10 per cent of its face value." This was put into effect in conjunction with other regulations tightening restrictions on margin dealings.

Curb Follows Big Board to Higher Ground

Alcohols, Metals and Oils Lead Rise; Trading, 292,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—The curb market broke out of its narrow trading range and advanced in sympathy with the big board today. Buying orders were well distributed over the active groups.

Utilities, alcohols, metals, oils and various specialties moved forward substantially. Newmont Mining rose more than 4 points, while shares up around 2 or more included American Gas & Electric, American Light & Traction, Electric Bond & Share, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Hiram Walker, New Jersey Zinc, Parker Rust Proof and Tubize Chatillon.

Other firm spots included Celluloid Corporation and the Celanese issues. Humble Oil, Swift & Co., Aluminum Co. of America, Pan-American Airways and Atlas Corporation gained a point or more each.

Transfers approximated 292,000 shares, compared with 190,000 yesterday.

Wall Street Briefs.

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—George W. Davidson, chairman of the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., yesterday was elected president of the New York Clearing House Association, succeeding Mortimer N. Buckner, chairman of the New York Trust Co., who had served two years. Percy H. Johnson, president of the Chemical Bank & Trust Co., was made chairman of the Clearing House committee.

Adams Express Co. reports net asset value of $6.44 per common share as of September 30 after deduction of outstanding bonds and preferred stock.

Wabash Railroad freight loadings last week were 11,816 cars compared with 12,151 the previous week and 12,337 the same week last year.

Preliminary trade figures indicate August shoe production reached a new high for any month this year with between 35,000 and 37,500 pairs turned out. September estimates were slightly under these figures.

The North American Co. reported an increase of more than 13 per cent for the third quarter in electric output compared with the same period in 1932. This was the first time in four years the third quarter showed a gain over the second quarter, the report said, adding that increased industrial demand accounted for most of the gain.

New minimum prices on merchant bars of billet steel have been filed with the American Iron and Steel Institute under the NRA code of fair competition. They are: $1.75 per 100 pounds, Pittsburgh; $1.80, Cleveland and Chicago;; $2.15 gulf ports and $2.30 Pacific ports. Quotations are effective October 13.

Deliveries of coffee in the United States totaled 1,029,000 bags last month compared with 883,000 a year ago, reports the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange.

Freight loadings of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific last week totaled 25,580 cars against 25,045 the week before and 26,861 a year ago.

September was the best month in Chrysler corporation's overseas business since April, 1930, W. L. Mitchell, chairman of the company's export subsidiary, announced today. Shipments were 428.2 per cent of those in September, 1932.

Municipal bond circles expect an early announcement of new long-term financing for New York State. An offering of slightly less than $30,000,000 of bonds will be placed, it is understood, before the end of October under competitive bidding. The issue, it is said, will consist of general improvement bonds, due in from 1 to 25 years; emergency construction bonds of like maturities, and grade crossing elimination bonds, due in from 1 to 50 years.

Early Opening Of Three Banks Expected Here

Approval of Independent Plan by Treasury Near, Sponsors Believe.

Approval of plans for independent reopening of the Franklin National Bank, the United States Savings and the Industrial Savings is expected momentarily from the Treasury Department, it was learned yesterday.

Prompt attention will be given these three institutions, now that merger has been settled between the Mt. Vernon Savings Bank and the Washington Mechanics Savings, it was said.

Indications that details toward the reopening of these banks is almost over were given when Maj. W. Irving Shuman, special representative of the Comptroller of the Currency, was transferred to Chicago.

Leader in Reorganizations

Maj. Shuman took the major part in the reorganization plans for Washington banks. He will now become affiliated with the new Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Ezra Gould, president of the Washington Mechanics Savings Bank, who fostered the plan for absorbing the Mount Vernon, announced that officers of the Mechanics will continue as officers of the new combined institution.

Other Officers Listed.

The other officers, in addition to Mr. Gould and Mr. Lee, are Clarence F. Burton, vice president and cashier; Dr. Edward F. Pickford and A. S. Offutt, vice presidents; Mrs. M. H. Buckingham, secretary; Joseph M. McCarthy, W. B. Mehler, jr., and B. M. Grant, assistant cashiers.

Directors are Walter K. Bachrach, Mr. Burton, Mr. Gould, George Hayes, L. Hoyt Lamb, Jesse B. K. Lee, Mr. Pickford, J. C. Pyles, Edwin E. Roberts, F. P. Williams, John P. F. White, E. S. Wolfe, Guy Mason, and Mr. Offutt.

Furnace Oil Trade Called Industry Boon

New York, Oct. 4.—Consumption of furnace oil by oil burners is growing twice as fast as did the consumption of gasoline from development of the automobile, despite the fact that leading companies are doing nothing to promote the installation of oil burners, it is brought out by the T. S. Hose Review of the petroleum industry, which states that demand for fuel oil is now nearly one-fifth of the total demand for gasoline.

The petroleum companies would do well, in the opinion of Mr. Hose, to give more attention to fostering the growth of this important outlet for their product. The oil burner, born in 1921, has become of immense value to the industry in stabilizing consumption in view of the fact that it offers a steady demand during the winter months when the need for gasoline is at its seasonal low.

"The growth of the oil burner industry, with its resultant demand for fuel oils," says the review, "has apparently been taken as a matter of course by the oil companies, which have stood aside, allowed the gas interests to attack the oil burner industry without bothering to raise a hand in its defense, and apparently not realizing that the demand for fuel oil is nearly one-fifth of the demand for gasoline.

"Years ago, when it looked as though gas would replace kerosene, the petroleum industry stood aside and did nothing. The automobile came along, thus creating a demand for the most useless by-product derived from a barrel of crude oil—gasoline. No effort was made to promote the use of the automobile or to assist the automobile manufacturer who, in spite of the oil industry, has created a demand for gasoline of nearly 16,000,000,000 gallons per year. Now, the oil burner, born in 1921, has single-handed fought the public utilities companies' propaganda, has grown twice as fast as the automobile industry, and is today one of the most profitable outlets for the by-product of oil, using last year approximately 3,000,000,000 gallons of fuel oil. Oil burning ranges alone have increased from 15 in 1923, to 747,027 at the end of 1932.

"In the refining of a barrel of crude oil approximately 50 per cent is gasoline. Forty per cent can be used in various types of oil burners. The balance is lubricating oil, miscellaneous products and waste. This fuel oil is a product which has no other market. Oil burners are so constructed that excess stocks of gasoline can be reduced by mixing them with fuel oils. Domestic oil burners for heating purposes are estimated to total 811,050, whereas figures furnished to me by reliable sources indicate that there are a sufficient number of people financially able, in climates where continuous winter heat is required, to use a total of 7,000,000. The potential market for industrial burners is unlimited."

British Auto Sales Gain in New Zealand

High customs duties, together with surtaxes, and unfavorable exchange have almost eliminated American automobiles from the New Zealand market, according to a report from Vice Consul W. W. Orebaugh, Wellington, made public by the Commerce Department.

In the years 1929 and 1930 American small cars were the best sellers in the lower priced field, but the small-type British cars with engines up to 10 horse-power have now secured a large proportion of this business.

Figures for the first half of this year indicate that sales of these cars will amount to about 2,500 during the year. Considering the fact that total sales this year will be less than 4,000 units, this figure is an impressive showing, the report states.

It is reported on good authority, according to Vice Consul Orebough, that there were 659 new cars of British origin on hand on June 30, 1933, as compared with 619 on the same date last year. On June 30, 1932, there were also 535 American or Canadian automobiles on hand, whereas the stocks of these on June 30 of the current year were almost nil. Total imports of American and Canadian makes amounted to only 63 cars and chassis for the first half of this year.

Wall Street Expects Dollars To Be Stable by End of Year

New York, Oct. 4 (AP).—Wall street is swinging strongly to the opinion that some sort of stabilization of the dollar is not far away.

While some observers feel the wish may be the daddy of this hunch, high financial quarters insist that signs indicate action toward a stable dollar before the end of the year.

There is considerable confusion over the time element. Few care to guess just when such action might take place, although some say it might well be by the middle of November.

Important banking quarters say that Washington is finding an unstable dollar a distinct hindrance to its credit expansion program. Big bankers insist they can not extend credit in any volume without some knowledge as to the sort of dollars with which the debt will be paid.

Wall street has thus far received no definite inkling from Washington as to the administration's monetary plan, but some banking leaders expressed the opinion that the warning this week by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, as to the dangers to the working man in the sort of inflation which has been experienced in Europe, was deeply significant. They found it particularly so, coming as it did a short time after Secretary of Agriculture Wallace had publicly asserted that inflation could not cure the ills of the farmer.

Some Wall street experts feel that stabilization of the dollar in relation to the British pound sterling, which seems to have an even more important effect upon price levels than the ratio of the dollar to the gold currencies, may well enter into the negotiations on the British war debt, starting soon after the arrival of Sir Frederick Leith-Ross, to represent the British government later this week. A more definite monetary policy, it is felt, might be necessary to a debt settlement, so that the debtors may know what sort of dollars they must use in payment.

It is felt that some formula will be found to give the dollar a more definite value, without a deflationary effect upon domestic price levels, which may mean a devaluation in terms of gold somewhat below that indicated by the present ratio to the gold currencies. Some experts assert, however, that devaluation alone can have but limited effect upon price levels, pointing out that they have risen but a fraction of the present drop of 35 per cent in dollars in relation to gold currencies. Devaluation of such important currencies as the dollar and the pound, they say, tends to depress gold prices, so there is no corresponding rise in dollar or pound prices.

Japan Claims Lead in Cloth Over England

Tokyo Says Cotton Fabric Exports Now Exceed Britain's Trade.

Tokyo, Oct. 4 (AP).—Japan's cotton industry pointed to statistics today and claimed it had ended Great Britain's century-long reign as the world's greatest cotton cloth exporting nation.

Statistics prepared by the Japanese Federation of Cotton Textile Manufacturers for the first eight months of 1933 showed Japan exported 1,392,000,000 square yards of cotton cloths to Britain's 1,386,000,000.

Leaders of the industry described the statistics as illustrating the steady gains made by the vigorous young Japanese industry, which entered world markets three-quarters of a century after the British, at the expense of Lancashire's domination.

In 1929, the statistics further showed, exports of cotton cloths from Great Britain totaled 3,866,000,000 square yards to 1,418,000,000 for Japan.

In 1932 Great Britain exported 2,198,000,000 square yards, while Japan exported 2,031,000,000.

California Citrus Crop Price Gains

Los Angeles, Oct. 4 (AP).—The citrus industry has been experiencing a steady price climb in the past five months since reaching an all time low average in April of $2.42 per box for oranges in the Eastern and Middlewestern fruit auctions.

September's average for valencias was $3.40 per box, a 10 per cent rise over the August figure, and 2 per cent, or 7 cents a box higher than the September average last year. However, the oranges sold during September for less than half the prices of the prosperity season of 1930, when the month's average was $7.23.

For the last three months, July, August and September, the average has been over the $3 figure, which the growers say is the cost of actual production, picking, packing and shipping.

Compensatory Tax In Fibers Studied

(Associated Press.)

The Farm Administration yesterday took under consideration arguments for and against a proposed compensatory tax on competing products to equalize the 4.2 cents a pound processing tax on cotton.

Jute and paper manufacturers, at a public hearing on the proposed compensatory tax, argued their products served particular fields and the processing tax on cotton had not caused an excessive shift from cotton to their fibers.

Wheat Renews Climb on Spurt Of Wide Buying

Market Trend Is Changed on Securities Strength: Corn Declines.

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—Hopeful t[alk] a decided stimulant to values woul[d] result from an address by President Roosevelt tonight, most wheat traders favored the purchase side today.

Wheat scored a maximum raise of 2 cents a bushel, and held the bulk of the grain despite temporary sharp price breaks, in the corn market. There were enlarged rural offerings of corn to arrive here, and official reports indicated that frost perils to the corn crop were virtually at an end.

Wheat closed firm, 1⅛@1¼ above yesterday's finish; corn, unchanged to ¼ lower; oats, ⅜ off to ⅛ up, and provisions varying from 12 cents decline to 17 cents advance.

Broader Buying Starts.

Broader buying power in the wheat market went parallel with strength shown in securities, and received some momentum from advices that estimates of European wheat import requirements were being enlarged. It developed also that foreigners seeking breadstuff supplies were again in the market, and had taken 1,250,000 bushels of Canadian wheat today for shipment overseas.

On the other hand, the price spread between Chicago and Winnipeg widened somewhat, with weather in the Cadanian prairie provinces favorable for thrashing.

Considerable notice was taken of persistent reduction of domestic receipts of wheat, the total today being only 726,000 bushels, against 1,375,000 a year ago.

Grasshopper Menace Seen.

Predictions of a new and fiercer outbreak of grasshoppers Northwest in the coming season were also given attention. A comprehensive summary from railroad sources telling of favorable winter wheat prospects southwest failed to act as an offset, and in the late trading houses with Kansas City connections were buyers.

A leading speculative holder of corn was reported to have let go of his lines today, but the market later rallied owing to improved shipping demand. Oats followed corn.

Export Trade In Argentina Losing in '33

Argentina's export trade in the first eight months of 1933 showed a decline in value of 17 per cent, as compared with the corresponding period of last year, according to a report from Consul John W. Bailey, jr., Buenos Aires, made public by the Commerce Department. Total exports in the eight months ended August, 1933, were valued at 346,427,000 gold pesos, compared with 416,311,000 in the 1932 period.

The value of Argentine cereal shipments in the first eight months of 1933 was 199,133,000 gold pesos, as compared with 275,911,000 in 1932, a decrease of 28 per cent.

This decline, it is pointed out, is attributable chiefly to decreased shipments of corn, which were nearly 43 per cent less in the 1933 period than in 1932. Marked declines were also registered for oats and linseed.

Exports of Live Stock.

Exports of live stock products in the 1933 period were 4 per cent above those of 1932, the respective totals being 118,888,000 gold pesos and 114,449,000 gold pesos. This development occurred almost entirely as a result of increased shipments of hides and wool, as meat exports continued to decline.

Exports of quebracho extract in the 1933 period amounted to 132,000 tons as compared with 118,000 tons in 1932, while exports of quebracho logs increased from 38,000 to 45,000 tons.

With declining prices, however, the value increase for extract was only 459,000 gold pesos and for logs 28,000 pesos.

Prices of Exports.

Prices of Argentine export commodities for the first eight months of 1933, when compared with the corresponding period of 1932 show material decreases in practically all important lines, it is pointed out.

While official statistics of Argentine exports by countries of destination are not yet available, declared export records in the United States Consulate-General show that shipments to the United States were well maintained during the month of August.

In that period declared exports had a value of $6,356,840, as compared with $5,486,212 in July, an increase of 16 per cent.

Retail Buying Begins Climb On Confidence

Dollar Volume Rises to Record in Some Areas; Higher for Week.

New York, Oct. 4.—Following the easement in retail demand for nearly two weeks, fall buying is moving forward with more surety, as needs are too pressing to permit further postponement, and buying power is provided by the constantly widening gains in employment, according to data compiled by Dun & Bradstreet, Inc. While the dollar volume of retail sales in some districts is the largest for any fall in three years, and in others is running 25 per cent above that of last September, the average is only slightly above that of a year ago, when the declines will have been deducted for those cities which have been affected acutely by unfavorable weather conditions and an unemployment situation yet to be relieved to more than a slight degree.

On the whole, September volume has been in excess of that of the comparative month of 1932, but the good totals of August were equaled in only a few sections.

There was a rather sharp pickup this week in the sales of shoes, while millinery moved in good volume, and purchases of hosiery, jewelry, handbags and toilet accessories increased.

Furs and Silks.

The strong demand for high-grade furs and silk goods, which started about the middle of August, has expanded to such an extent that the current season is expected to be the best in a number of years. Sales of men's clothing have reached the largest total in three years, with little obstruction seemingly provided by the higher prices placed on the medium class of garments. Some movement in top-coats has been reported.

There has been no cessation in the upward trend of sales of furniture, rugs, and housefurnishings, with curtains, table linens, china, crystal stemware, and radios contributing heavily to the enlarged volume in this division.

In the women's ready-to-wear division, dresses easily monopolized the attention. Crepe and satin in tunic effect, business dresses of tailored simplicity, and town frocks with touches of fur or interesting jabot and collar treatment were but a few of the sales leaders.

Knit Costumes Demand.

The demand for knit costumes, three-piece sport combinations, swagger suits of tweed, and leather jackets appears to be increasing in direct ratio to the decrease in working hours, as much of the new leisure apparently is being spent in the pursuit of healthful outdoor recreations.

As expanding family budgets permit a resumption of social life this fall, interest in evening gowns already is manifest, extending over the wide range of low-back, high-waist and long-skirt effects in which have been incorporated the exotic motifs approved by the leading conturiers.

While coats were more or less neglected, because of the unseasonably warm weather, sales of fur garments have made a good showing.

Theater as Index.

That the withering blight of fear and apprehension, which was holding consumer spending almost below the irreducible minimum at this time last year, has been dispelled is conclusively present in the abrupt gains recorded in the paid admissions to motion-picture theaters.

To prevent any lessening of the bulge which has become sharply projected during the last three months, in proportion, to the bulkier pay roll totals, studios are doubling their staffs and casts to complete the new films with the least possible delay.

Lots which have been locked for months have been transformed into scenes of hectic activity.

Railroad Credit Will Pay Again To Carriers

The Railroad Credit Corporation, which was set up by the railroads to administer funds derived from emergency rates granted by the Interstate Commerce Commission under Ex Parte No. 103, and which is now engaged in liquidating its affairs, will make another repayment of 2 per cent to participating carriers on October 16, the corporation announced today.

This repayment will amount to $1,473,000, of which $607,000 will be in cash and $866,000 will be in credits.

Including the repayment to be made on October 16, there have been three authorized distributions so far made by the Railroad Credit Corporation amounting to $5,205,449, or 7 per cent of the fund contributed by the participating carriers.

The report showing financial condition of the corporation as of September 30, 1933, was filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission today.

In a letter addressed to the chief executives of the participating carriers and accompanying the report, E. G. Buckland, president of the Railroad Credit Corporation, said:

"The board of directors has authorized, as distribution No. 3, a repayment to the participating carriers of 2 per cent of the contributed fund as of September 30, 1933. This distribution, to be made October 16, 1933, will, in round figures, amount to $1,473,000, of which $607,000 will be in cash and $866,000 will be credits.

"The three authorized distributions are equivalent to 7 per cent of the fund or a repayment to the participating carriers of $5,205,449; cash repayments totaling $2,147,302, and the remainder, or $3,058,147, being creditable on obligations of carriers indebted to the fund."

Drama of Fear Pictured With Vivid Realism

Paul Robeson Gives Super Performance in Role of Brutus Jones.

"THE EMPEROR JONES." John Krimsey-Gifford Cochran picturization of the stage play by Eugene O'Neill, adapted to the screen by DuBose Heyward, starring Paul Robeson, with Dudley Digges. Directed by Dudley Murphy; released by United Artists. Reviewed Wednesday morning.

It is, perhaps, a superfluous tribute to Eugene O'Neill's skill as a playwright that this picturization of one of his most noted plays should take on a quality of chilling and convincing realism only after the visualization of events which he merely implied is over with and the action progresses strictly in accordance with the movement of the plot as it was originally written.

"The Emperor Jones," which in its new form can not but be hailed as one of the cinema's most notable achievements, finds it necessary to bring to the screen all of the events in the earlier life of Brutus Jones that led to his flight from the country, and, eventually, to his spurious arrogation of himself to a place of power over a simple but vengeful island people.

His experiences as a Pullman porter, inducted into the blazing welter of Harlem's "hot" spots, excited to murder through his passion for the dice, sentenced to the chain gang—where he slays a guard in a slightly more righteous burst of temper—and as a stoker on the ship that carries him within swimming distance of the tiny land he was in time to rule with the icy avarice of an absolute monarch, are vastly more movie and proportionately less moving than those later tragic hours when Emperor Jones, clad in all the bizarre insignia of his high office is stripped of finery, sanity and life itself by the terror engendered by a guilty conscience as he plunges through the jungle, intent only on escape from himself and the penalty of his crimes.

Pathetic Figure.

It is a figure at once powerful and pathetic that O'Neill has here created. From an arrogant and ruthless conqueror, we see the man who has hoisted himself to a sort of eminence by a supreme egotism and his bootstraps gradually disintegrate under the persistent gnawing of a great fear. As the tom-toms of his crafty enemies pound a contsant warning into his frightened ears, he conjures first visions of his own immediate offenses against the law; then there take shape in his tortured mind the inborn horrors of the slave auction and, finally, the savage retributive rites of the primitive jungle. Groveling like a trapped beast, he falls then into the net laid by his pursuers, prey to the silver bullets which, in the gigantic hoax that had made him the Emperor Jones, he had persuaded the natives was the only kind that ever could cause his death.

In the title role Paul Robeson gives a superb performance. There is, to be sure, little of the illusion of jungle origin in Robeson's bearing during the greater portion of the picture's footage. He gives the impression of a greater mental and physical strength than would crumble to nothing in so short a time, even in the face of so colossal a fear as he conjured up in contemplation of his sins. However, in cumulative forcefulness, the compounding of his enormous arrogance and the final awareness of how utterly counterfeit his greatness actually was, Robeson proves himself one of the most gifted members of his race. In addition to his mental and physical equipment for a full comprehension of the role and its perfect embodiment, he displays his deep and resonant barytone in many Negro spirituals, appropriately punctuating the action.

Digges Also Scores.

"The Emperor Jones" is strictly a one-character play, although numerous others take part in its early sequences on the screen. The only other figure of note is the Cockney trader, impersonated with his customary and complete proficiency by Dudley Digges.

A fair run-of-the-mine comedy, "How Comedies Are Born;" a Scrappy cartoon, "Movie Struck;" an NRA featurette, with Charles Ruggles and Mary Boland, and an especially interesting issue of Pathe News, with the first world series game in some detail, are the auxiliaries surrounding a feature that no thoughtful picturegoer can afford not to see, if an adult screen is among the more optimistic of his day dreams.

Air Service a Hazard, Flying Andean Route

"Night Flight," the six-star saga of the skies, will provide thrilling drama on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow. In addition to presenting a vigorous drama of the air, this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture enlists one of the finest multistar cases ever assembled for a single production.

Lending their talents to this cinematic achievement are John Barrymore, Helen Hayes, Clark Gable, Lionel Barrymore, and Myrna Loy.

There is a distinct thrill and authenticity to "Night Flight," which was adapted by Oliver H. P. Garrett from the prize novel by a flyer, Antoine de Saint-Exupery. It tells grippingly the incidents in the running of a big air mail company in South America, the same company for which the author flew for several years. It has been put on the screen with complete fidelity by a director-flyer, Clarence Brown.

The tale concerns John Barrymore, an air mail company manager, whose creed is that the mail must go through; Robert Montgomery, the pilot on the trans-Andrean run; Clark Gable, shooting northward through a terrific storm, and Helen Hayes, Gable's distracted wife. Subordinate plots bring out excellent work from Myrna Loy, William Gargan, C. Henry Gordon, Leslie Fenton, and others. Lionel Barrymore, as the shiftless, easy-going inspector of planes, is a perfect foil to his stern brother.

Augmenting this production is a Charley Chase comedy; a Metro oddity, and current news subjects.

Bing Crosby in "Too Much Harmony" —Metropolitan.

Unusual Story Of Youth Will Feature Earle

The program which begins tomorrow at Warner Bros. Earle Theater, packed with all the ingredients that make perfect entertainment, is headed by First National's timely and forceful screen drama, "Wild Boys of the Road," the story of a half-million wandering boys and girls. The stage features Borrah Minevitch and his Harmonica Rascals.

Ripped from the front pages of America's newspapers, "Wild Boys of the Road," is a vivid depiction of what a half a million of America's boys and girls in their teens are going through in this country.

Five hundred thousand of these "Wild Boys," it was recently reported to a congressional investigating committee—boys and girls mixed—were riding on freight trains, living under bridges, in hobe jungles, in "sewer pipe cities," in swamps, victims of diseases, without law, panhandling, begging, bumming, fighting, with no one seemingly caring in the least what become of them.

The leading feminine role in the story is played by Dorothy Coonan, who came out of the chorus of "42nd Street and "Gold Diggers of 1933." Other roles are all taken by youths under 20 — Frankie Darro, Edwin Philips, Ann Hovey and Sterling Holloway.

This is Minovitch's second appearance in Washington, where his band of unusual musicians have become a favorite of vaudeville patrons. Other stage acts will be Jay Mills, the Broadway comic, assisted by Gertie Green in a fun fest; Red Donahue and Pal, the pal being a kicking donkey; Tommy Man, Bobby Robinson and Virginia Martin, in "Dance Fantasy," and Gracie Barrie, mistress of ceremonies.

The program is completed by a new Paramount comedy, "Sailor Beware," with Eugene Palette and Walter Catlett, the new Graham MacNamee news and Earle orchestral prelude.

Rustic Humor And New Star Fox Features

America and Europe have lavished their praises on the Weaver brothers, Abner and Cicero, and Elviry and all the Arkansas "home folks," in the Weaver coterie. And beginning tomorrow, patrons of Loew's Fox Theater will add their plaudits when thrown into convulsive laughter by the music and comedy of this rustic troupe.

Making the current entertainment more complete is the screen attraction, "My Weakness," which presents the toast of the continent, Lilian Harvey, to American audiences for the first time in an American-made picture. With Lew Ayres as her leading man, Miss Harvey is seen in one of the gayest, giddiest, musical romances of recent months.

"My Weakness" possesses every element of popular appeal. It was written by Buddy DeSylva, America's outstanding lyricist, and has some infectious melodies, which were especially composed by three luminaries of Tin Pan Alley. And it has world's of romance, and, to say nothing of the most gorgeous beauties that the screen has ever glorified. The supporting cast boasts Charles Butterworth, Harry Langdon, Sid Silvers, Barbara Weeks, Irene Bentley and others.

The Weaver Brothers are guaranteed to provoke more genuine laughter than F street has heard in a long time. They play the most absorbing tunes on the strangest of instruments.

Able Players People Drama Of Crookdom

An unusual screen offering will be presented at Loew's Columbia Theater, beginning tomorrow, in "The Solitaire Man," a startling drama of continental crookdom, featuring Herbert Marshall.

The suave and handsome Marshall and Elizabeth Allan, who scored recently in "Looking Forward," portray the romantic leads, with Mary Boland and May Robson sharing comedy highlights. Also featured are Lionel Atwill, Ralph Forbes, Lucille Gleason and Robert McWade.

This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer filmization of the play by Bella and Samuel Spewack, is said to be a distinct departure from the conventional handling of drama for the screen. Many of the tense moments of the picture are confined in the limited space of an air-line cabin with the conflict of personalities mounting to terrific heights.

Marshall surpasses his brilliant portrayal of "Trouble in Paradise" in this new picture in which he plays the part of a war veteran driven to superthievery by financial reverses. The restraint and suave charm that have established him as one of the screen's most popular leading men are distinguishing qualities of this current role.

Recent news flashes, a comedy and short subjects will complete the entertainment.

Musical Film Held Over for Metropolitan

Washington will be able to see "Too Much Harmony" for a few more days. The Paramount musical which has taken Washington by storm will remain until next Thursday night, October 12, when it will make way for a new attraction. Bing Crosby is starred, with Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher, Judith Allen and Harry Green in support.

"Too Much Harmony," moving in and out of a theatrical atmosphere, features the adventures of a group of show people rehearsing for a forthcoming musical comedy. Bing Crosby, star of the show, is engaged to the fascinating gold-digger, Lilyan Tashman. He meets Judith Allen while on a trip in the West, thinks she has great stage possibilities, and makes her a member of the show, and promptly falls in love with her.

Eight new song hits by Arthur Johnston and Sam Coslow are introduced in the film. They are "Thanks," "Buckin' the Wind," "Cradle Me With a Hot-Cha Lullaby," "Black Moonlight," "Boo-Boo-Boo," "The Day You Came Along," "The Two Aristocrats," and "I Guess I Had to Be That Way."

Completing the program are selected short-reels, including a new Looney Tune Song Cartoon, entitled "We're in the Money," "The March of the Champions," a Grantland Rice-Sportlight, and the latest issue of the Paramount Sound News.

Epic of North Another Week

The cold, white glamour of S O S Iceberg" is a new element in motion pictures and its attraction is so new and so unusual that it is not to be wondered at that this great epic of the North will remain at the Rialto Theater for a second week.

The film's gala opening, with the approval of the Danish Government, through its Minister to the United States, Mr. Otto Wadsted, marked the reopening of the Rialto under auspicious circumstances and Washingtonians have found this distinctive picture, which required a year in the wilds of Greenland to make, a production of wonders and marvels.

Dr. Arnold Fanck created "S O S Iceberg" after a story of his own writing. Tom Read prepared the screen version and Fanck used a cast that includes Rod LaRocque, Leni Riefenstahl, Gibson Gowland, Walter Riml, Sepp Rist, Ernst Udet the German flier, Knud Rasmussen, the Arctic explorer, and Gustav Lantschner.

The Rialto completes its second week's showing of "S O S Iceberg" with a short comedy featu and the latest Universal News, w Graham McNamee.

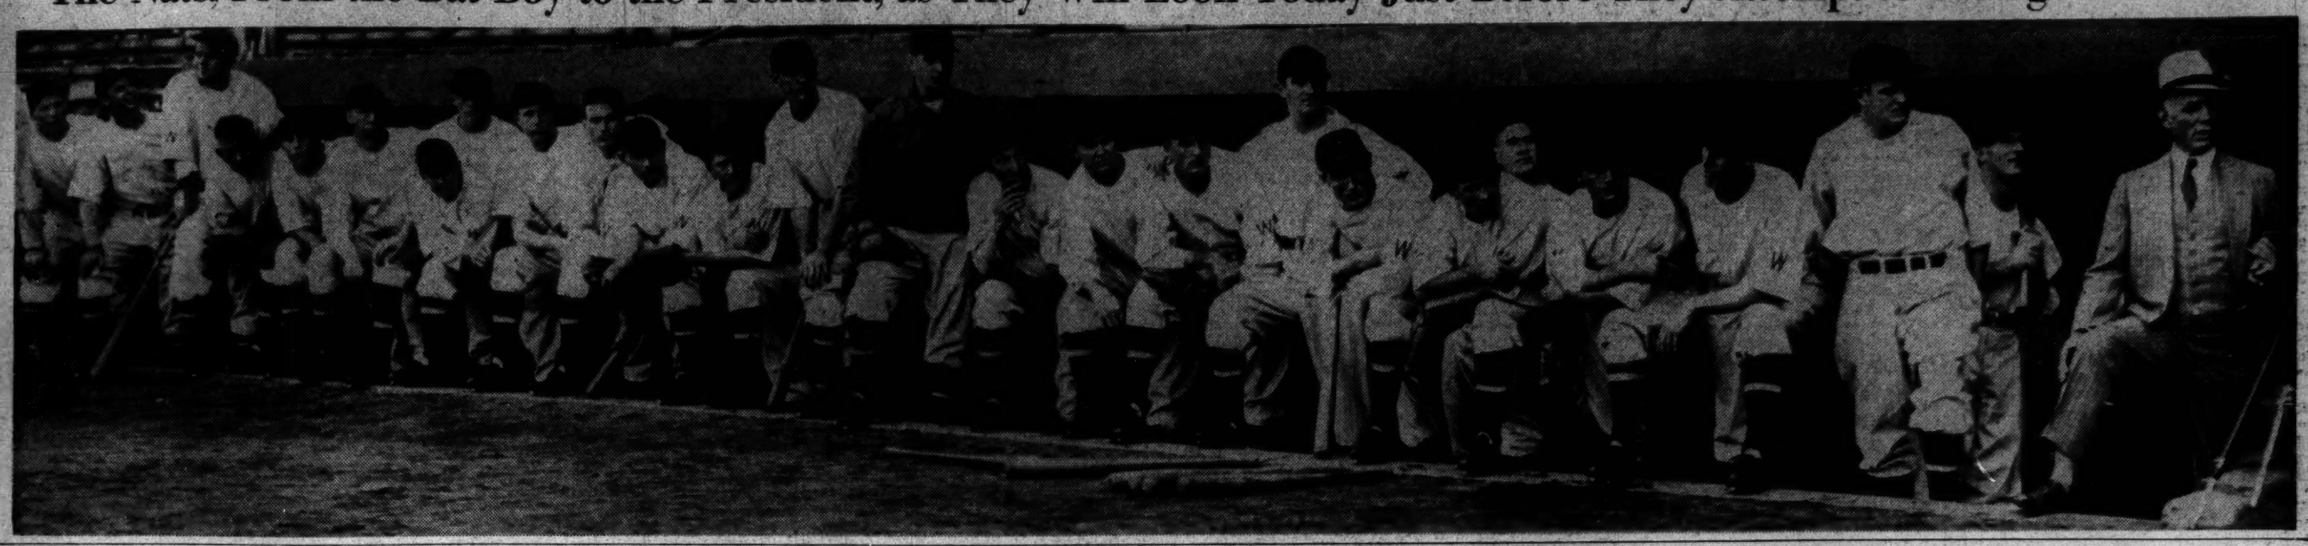
Nats, Beaten 6-1, Rely on Whitehill Today as Series Shifts to Capital

The Nats, From the Bat Boy to the President, as They Will Look Today Just Before They Attempt to Salvage the Series



Breaks Prove Big Factor In Game

Each Team Got Them, But Giants Used Luck to Better Purpose.

Crucial Periods Arrived in the Second and Sixth Frames.

By Frank H. Young
Staff Correspondent.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 4—In a short series, such as that for the world title, where the team winning four out of seven games is declared the champion, the breaks of the game can and often do decide the issue.

In yesterday's opening tussle, the Nats failed to get a single smile from Lady Luck, but today the fickle dame probably figures she showed no partiality when she equally divided the only two favors she bestowed.

As regards numbers, the Nats fared equally with the Giants, but their one break helped the Capital men little, while there is no telling exactly what harm resulted from the one which went to their opponents.

It was in the second round that the first break came, and the Nats were duly thankful for it at the time. Neither team had scored. Ott was on third for the Giants, Davis on second, and there were two out. Blondy Ryan, the New York shortstop, was at the plate and a hit, with both runners on the go, would have meant two runs. The Nats were uneasy. Pitcher Al Crowder was walking in circles around the slab, with the count on Ryan against him. Finally, the Nat flinger cut loose. It was a high ball and close to the batter. He tried to get his bat out of the way, but couldn't, and a tap to Joe Kuhel to end the inning resulted.

Calm Then Until Sixth.

Remembering the way they had been treated in the matter of breaks in the opening contest, the Nats breathed an almost audible sigh of relief and figured this was another day and that now was their turn. As things turned out, though, Lady Luck was only teasing them. She interfered in no way, however, until the sixth. And then she had plenty to say.

The bases were filled with Giants, as a result of a single by Moore, a force-play, Terry's double and an intentional walk to Ott, when Lefty Frank O'Doul, the converted pitcher, was sent to the tee in the place of the weak-batting George Davis. Two strikes were on O'Doul and it looked as though Crowder had him struck out on a tip to Catcher Luke Sewell. Maybe Lady Luck figured she had been too completely ignoring last year's National League hitting champ, for he has been nothing but a substitute and utility hitter this season. Or maybe she figured the Nats had gotten their share of her smiles while winning the American League gonfalon. But, whatever her reason, what happened was that O'Doul's foul tip grazed the top of Sewell's mitt instead of landing in it.

He Then Does Plenty.

Instead of being a strikeout victim and a second out, O'Doul was given another chance. And what he did after that is now history. He singled to score two runs, letting the Giants come from 1 down to 1 up, and started them on a rally which netted their only runs of the game.

Although this big break played an exceptionally large part in the Giants' victory, it can not be said that the Nats deserved to win. Goose Goslin put them in front with a homer, which probably would have cleared the right field wall in Griffith Stadium, in the third inning, and this was the only safety they garnered off Hal Schumacher's curves in the first four innings. Myer coaxed a walk, opening the game, but Goslin and Manush between them were able to advance him but one base, and he died on second, watching Cronin strike out. In the second, with two out, Bluege walked and he got no farther than first.

Get Another Chance.

Local Betters Fail To Find 10-1 Odds

With the Giants quoted as 5-to-2 favorites in New York, the reported arrival in Washington of a well-known gambling Gothamite bearing large sums to wager on the Giants at 10 to 1, sent the local gambling gentry scurrying from their haunts in search of easy money.

The local wagering element dug in their socks—those that had socks—and started in frantic search of the preseason Santa Claus, whose presence was reported by one of the group of high-powered speculators plying their trade here during the series. At an early hour this morning the New York philanthropist had not been run to cover, but the Ninth street betters, who had been snapping eagerly at 2-to-1 odds, were still searching hopefully.

(Post Staff Correspondent.)

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 4.—The lightning of New York's inspired National League champions struck a second time with devastating effect today to the astonished delight of 35,461 howling fans, who watched the Washington Nationals hurled beneath an avalanche of ringing base hits and scampering runs in one big, decisive inning.

Like a bolt of lightning from the graying sky, where huge cloud masses scudded before a whistling north wind, the blow fell. Rabid Gotham fans, who had watched disconsolately through five innings of this second world series game while Gen. Alvin Crowder set the Giants down with goose egg after goose egg, leaped suddenly to their feet, shrieking joy as the clatter of base hits resounded through the Polo Grounds. When it was over, the spectacular sixth inning, within which the National League champions batted once around and then some, the Giants were leading, 6 to 1, which proved to be the final score.

The transition from a rather dull pitchers' battle, in which "Goose" Goslin's long home run in the third inning had given Crowder an edge over youthful Hal Schumacher, into a cataclysmic rout of all Washington's hopes, was both startling and unexpected.

There was no hint, at the start of that sixth inning, of what was to come, and the crowd, which numbered several thousand less than at the Opening games, had put away its cowbells, settled into its seats, and appeared prepared to see Washington even up the series.

The spark which touched off the explosion, and sent that first electric warning thrill through the throng, was injected into the proceedings by young Schumacher, who learned his pitching tricks in an upper New York State college only a couple of years ago.

With the bases filled in the Nats' half of the sixth, the 23-year-old Giant pitcher bore down and fan-

Confident of Winning, Says Manager Cronin

"We've been in tighter holes than this in the past and have been able to snap out of them, and I'm confident that we will make a comeback in the world series," said Manager Joe Cronin, of the Nats, last night.

White Sox Win, 3-2, Victory Over Cubs

Wrigley Field, Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP). Behind the six-hit pitching of "Sad Sam" Jones, the White Sox defeated the Cubs, 3 to 2, in the first game of the city championship before a crowd of 12,000 spectators at Wrigley Field today. The White Sox scored all their runs by bunching four singles with an error in the second off Guy Bush.

Series Dignity and Prestige Ruined by Orgy of Batting

Pegler Describes Feats of O'Doul et al During Second Contest.

By Westbrook Pegler.

POLO GROUNDS, N. Y., Oct. 4. Last spring Lefty O'Doodle O'Doul was a member of Brooklyn Daffiness Boys, who finished sixth in the National League. This fall he is a member of the Giants, who finished first, and this afternoon he tagged a baseball for a single in the sixth inning which exploded the second game of the World Series.

The Giants won this one, 6 to 1, thanks very much to O'Doodle and both troupes, Giants and Nationals, and the corps of experts clattered away to Washington to resume the party tomorrow afternoon in Clark Griffith's American League snuggery where the Nats will find sympathy, at least. They found none of it in New York City and they seemed very low in spirits as they lost again to a ball club whose winning of the pennant in their league was attributed as much to the inferiority of the seven other clubs as to any charm or merit of their own.

Crowder's Embarrassment.

O'Doodle went up to hit in place of George Davis, a non-hitting outfielder on the ball club which made a fortune out of steady, consistent mediocracy, when Al Crowder filled the bases after five innings of efficient and fortunate pitching. Crowder had just thrown four pitchouts past Melvin Ott, the aging boy wonder of the Giants who had hit a home run and three other troublesome swipes the day before. O'Doodle then knocked one out to center field, scoring Critz and Terry and from that instant on the ball game was over, although Crowder went on suffering a long while more, trying, amid increasing embarrassments, to get the side out.

He never did succeed, although he pitched to ten hitters in the course of his ordeal. Al Thomas then came in and pitched to two more before the disturbance ended. Thus the dignity and prestige of the world series had been humiliated again by such an exhibition of loose and lusty busting as might have been considered no boost to the quality of an industrial league.

Goslin's Moment of Glory.

This O'Doodle O'Doul has been odd-jobbing around in the major leagues for quite a long spell now, but most interesting among his experiences, he will state to you, was his service with the Yankees back in the mischievous days of Babe Ruth. In that incarnation, Lefty O'Doodle was a pitcher. He had to go back to the minors and get himself reincarnated before he came up again as a heavy hitting outfielder.

At that, he never amounted to much as an outfielder, but they had to have some place to pasture him where he could do the least possible damage defensively in order to avail themselves of his talent with $1.75 worth of selected hickory. In fact, this afternoon, even after he had blown up the ball game with his single, Will Terry discreetly withdrew him least he get hit on the head with a fly ball or otherwise undo the bright achievement which had scored the runs which presently proved enough to win the game.

Goose Goslin, the old Jersey gander, was having a bit of a time for himself up to the awful half hour of the explosion. He hit a home run into the right field pa-

Little World Series Drew Few at Windup

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 4 (AP). — Attendance at the little world series between Columbus of the American Association and the International League Bisons, tapered off at the end, unfavorable weather being a big factor. A mere handful of fans, 3,424, saw the deciding game, compared with the crowd of 22,000 in the playoff with Rochester.

Nats, Giants Guests Of National Theater

Manager Joe Cronin, of the Nats, and all of his players, as well as the entire roster of the New York Giants, headed by Manager Bill Terry, will be the guests of Miss Lenore Ulric at the National Theater tonight, when they will see a performance of the new comedy, "Her Man of Wax," in which the actress is starred.

Cronin Pits Southpaw Against Fitzsimmons In Crucial 3d Game

President of Cubs' Recovery Is Doubted

Chicago, Oct. 4 (AP).—Little hope was held out tonight for the recovery of William L. Veeck, president of the Chicago Cubs, who is gravely ill with leucaemia, a blood disease. Oxygen was administered to aid him in breathing.

"Mr. Veeck is gravely ill and is not making any progress," said Dr. Leo C. Clowes, his physician.

Tickets Still Available All Over Park

Even Grand Stand and Box Seats Can Be Had, But Will Not Last.

TICKETS for today's game were available for practically every section of Griffith Stadium when the ticket windows were slammed shut last night, but a steady influx of late seekers after ducats tended to substantiate the optimistic prediction of club officials that the park would be sold out by game time.

While there are a number of grand stand and box seats still to be sold, they are not in the choicest locations. The best buys, according to club officials, can be made in the $3.30 pavilion sections. All ticket windows, including those handling the $1.10 pasteboards—on sale for the first time—will be thrown open promptly at 9 o'clock this morning.

The host of speculators which descended upon Washington from the Broadway sector, reports a steady demand for the best seats—which many of them seem to have. All claim to be doing good business, but, significantly enough, they are quite content with a one or two dollar profit on each ticket. Some of the "scalpers" complained of the number of their ilk who were plying their trade here, claiming the field was overcrowded. None, however, would admit losing or being faced with a loss.

Hoppe to Tour.

Minneapolis, Oct. 3 (AP).—Willie Hoppe, cue artist, said today he had rejoined the National Billiard Association and would go on tour for the organization soon.

Has Fast Knuckle Ball; Weaver Saved for Duel With Hubbell.

ON the overdeveloped left arm of Earl Whitehill, the Nats are staking their hopes of stemming the Giant tide today in the world series, which reaches the turning point this afternoon with the transfer of the scene from the Polo Grounds to Griffith Stadium.

Manager Joe Cronin, with more than a trace of grimness, announced positively that into the keeping of the southpaw ace of the Nats' staff would be given the third game of the series today.

On the firing line for the Giants is slated to be Fred Fitzsimmons, huge right-hander, who is rated second to Carl Hubbell in effectiveness. Thus the third game of the series finds opposed for the first time a contrast to pitching deliveries.

Cronin made his choice between Whitehill and Monte Weaver, who is now being held available for the fourth game tomorrow, when Carl Hubbell again is scheduled to work for the Giants.

Whitehill Well Rested.

Like Crowder, whose ill-starred effort cost the Nats the game yesterday, Whitehill has not worked impressively in the late games of the regular season after amassing a record of 22 victories against 8 defeats. But with a full week's rest, Whitehill will be in the best of condition.

Weaver, among all of the Washington pitchers, was the best performer during those waning days of the season and on present form appears to be the one Washington pitcher capable of giving Hubbell a worthy battle.

Cronin's choice of Whitehill was motivated also by the fact that the southpaw was best fitted to pitch to the Giants' hitting strength, Manager Bill Terry and Mel Ott, who swing left-handed.

Back on their home lot, the Nats' outfielders will have plenty of space to roam and the Nats' pitchers will not be throwing every pitch with the fear that it will drop into nearby bleachers for a home run. The Giants' pitchers, too, will be relieved of the same responsibility.

Brilliant Relief Pitching.

Fitzsimmons is another of the Giants' pitchers who is hailed as the possessor of a freak delivery compared to Hubbell's screw ball and Schumacher's sinker ball. His chief stock in trade is advertised as a fast knuckle ball, although big league hitters are unwilling to acknowledge that there is any such pitching animal.

The lone encouraging factor in the Nats' pitching during the world series thus far has been the uniformly brilliant work of their relief pitchers—Jack Russell, Al Thomas and Alec McColl.

In 8 1-3 innings, these relief pitchers have not allowed the Giants a run. Particularly clever yesterday was McColl's tour of duty, and, with Jack Russell still suffering from a slightly sprained wrist, the 39-year-old rookie may see more action in the series.

2,000 at Union Station Cheer Teams on Arrival and Show Loyalty to Nats

Big Welcome Given Club By Fans

Friends of All Ages Hail Leaders With Words of Confidence.

THE reception accorded the Giants and Nats by some 2,000 of the Capital's baseball-minded public at Union Station last night proved conclusively that win, lose or draw, Washington's loyalty remains stanchly behind the home-team.

Headed by John McCraw, the vanguard of Giants and their followers was greeted by a feeble chorus of cheers, mostly sardonic, intermingled with lusty boos and catcalls. The arrival of the Nats a few minutes later, however, was the signal for such a demonstration as is usually reserved for conquering heroes.

Ossie Bluege was the first of the Nats through the throng that jammed the train gates. He slipped through almost unnoticed. Heinie Manush's towering frame evoked a prolonged cheer. Buddy Myer, wearing a rather woe-begone expression, tried to escape notice, but the crowd would have none of it.

Crowder's Chin Up.

Alvin Crowder, with Mrs. Crowder close at his side, walked confidently up the platform to receive the greatest ovation tendered any of the team, with the exception of Joe Cronin, who followed him closely up the platform—apart and apparently deep in thought. A large group of the assembled crowd detached themselves from their fellow hero-worshippers and dogged the footsteps of the Crowder-Cronin trio to the taxicab entrance, shouting words of encouragement and cheer.

Clark Griffith and Mrs. Griffith slipped unobtrusively through the team greeters. Walter Johnson, hero of yesteryear's series, who arrived on the same train as his former teammates, was overlooked by the hometown folks.

All Ages Cheer.

An impromptu cheering section, headed by a group of boys from 15 to 50 years, greeted the Giants with sarcastically rhythmical collegiate cheers. A certain note of admiration pervaded the chorus that rose at the sight of Bill Terry, but the old hometown spirit that was evoked by the Nats was still missing.

Carl Hubbell, the dreaded pitching bugaboo of the Giants, pulled a fast one on the busy photographers, who were flitting about exploding flash bulbs like so many fireflies. The mound ace walked confidently up to the picture shooters, explained to them that he would be out of the way in a few seconds so they could shoot members of the team, and walked right out of the picture while they were still mulling the matter over in their minds.

All the Giants were out of the station by the time the train bearing the Nats arrived, so there was no opportunity to observe the reactions of the members of the two teams toward each other.

McMillan, Steele Grapple Tonight

Zeniaki, "Wild Man," Also on Auditorium Card.

There will be another "guest referee" at tonight's wrestling show in the person of Stan Baumgartner, former Philadelphia pitcher and sports writer, who will handle the main go between the flying tackler, Jim McMillan and Ray Steele. This is the first indoor show of the season and will be held at the Washington Auditorium, beginning at 8:30.

Aside from these features, the latest in Asiatic importations, Zeniaki, billed as the Siberian Wild Man, will rassle George Zaharias in the semiwindup.

tronage in the third inning and in the Washington half of the sixth he hit a single on Hal Schumacher and got around as far as third before Jackson and Mancuso, the Giants' catcher, trapped him between third and home. The Nats then filled the bases and the situation was fraught with interesting possibilities until Schumacher, with a docile hitter to work on, struck out Bluege and pitched himself out of his own trouble thereby.

Giants' Prophet Present.

Among the literati in the working press, beating out prophecy on the dancing tiddle-de-winks of a portable keyboard, was Mr. Mike Houston, the Virginia fortune-teller, who peered into a crystal ball, or crystal goblet, last spring and perceived a National League pennant flapping over the Polo Grounds. Mr. Houston was the only expert who chose the Giants, his optimism on their behalf exceeding even that of Will Terry, the manager who thought they might be no worse than third.

On his arrival in New York City to attend the world series, Mr. Houston was waited upon by John McGraw and invited to heave out the first ball at the opening game and he came out for morning practice two days running to work his arm into shape. At the last moment, however, Mr. Charlie Stoneham, the proprietor of the ball club, who stands in occasional need of political indulgence, decided that vindication, of itself, was sufficient reward for Mr. Houston's prophecy, and selected a Tammany statesman by the name of Mahon to perform this rite in behalf of Leader Johnny Curry and Mayor John J. O'Brien and the high ideals for which they stand.

Big Press Attendance.

Incidentally, there were 524 working press reservations, a new record, suggesting a more prosperous state of the newspaper budgets around the land than in the three seasons last past. In 1932 there were many conspicuous vacancies among the corps of experts, the absentees including some of the patriarchs who hadn't turned up missing at one of these things since the festival began.

Aside from a few durable old ball players and managers, such as McGraw, Jack Hendricks and Babe Ruth, the correspondents are the only body of regular attendants at the games. The customers vary according to the state of their health, their solvency and their enthusiasm, but the experts keep on coming until their recollection in many a case extends way back beyond the birth of the current stars.

It is less glamorous lugging a typewriter up the long ramps of the ball yards year after year and writing one little word after another behind the wire screen from which a party squints out upon the world from somewhat the same point of view as a varmint in a zoo but a fellow lasts much longer in this department.

In recent years it has not taken the customers long to conquer their enthusiasm over the World Series. They claimed every chair in the park for the opening game, but about 7,000 chairs were vacant today.

Nats Home to Resume Play After 6-1 Loss in 2d Game

And they stayed away from a brilliant pitching performance of young Hal Schumacher, who silenced the Nats' big guns with the exception of Goslin, by administrating a powerful right-handed pitching sedative that took the form of a 5-hit game.

Favorites at 1 to 2½.

Today the Nats will be hitting against the liveller American League ball, before home-town fans and home-town encouragement. But the Giants are now the favorites to win the series at odds of 2½ to 1.

Even as Carl Hubbell disposed of the Nats with 5 hits Tuesday, Schumacher disposed of them yesterday with 5 hits—all singles—even as did Hubbell. The sophomore of the Giants' pitching staff who received his masters' degree from St. Lawrence University during the recent playing season, graduated Cum Laude at his world series commencement. He caught up with and smashed to smithereens the tradition of perennial failures of rookie pitchers in the important post-series games.

Enjoys 1-0 Lead.

Crowder, the hard-boiled graduate of the U. S. Army enlisted ranks, was in possession of a two-hit shutout for five innings until the lightning struck in several places in the sixth. The grim old worker was heaving his fast ball past the Giants and enjoying immensely his 1-0 lead until the ball game crashed down about his ears in that awful sixth.

And then romance entered the world series. For the man who succeeded Al Thomas who had succeeded Crowder in that fateful sixth was Alec McColl, Washington's 39-year-old rookie from Chattanooga, who had beat about the bush leagues and the tank towns for 20 years before Washington seized him from Chattanooga late this summer by right of eminent domain and a Nats' emergency.

Blooms in Setting.

Fetched from the minors less than two months ago, McColl was cast into the midst of an important world series game at the start of the seventh inning and the rose who had been born to blush unseen and waste his fragrance in the desert air of minors bloomed yesterday afternoon in a world series setting.

Even as Tuesday, the Giants raised the issue of their reputedly weak batting attack by making ten hits off Washington pitching, again doubling the base hit total of the team that had been posted as the world series favorites in the recognition of the might of its batting attack.

Nats First to Strike.

Yesterday Washington was the first to strike. In each of the first two innings mild threats against Schumacher had been dissipated. But in the third, Goose Goslin took the situation into hand. None was on, two were out. The Goose turned on an inside pitch. He never reached the plate. Far into right field it sped, still going up when it crashed into the upper seats. A home run in anybody's ball park. Directly over an NRA sign it struck.

For five innings it appeared that the Nats might win by the sign of the NRA. And the Giants struck back.

Joe Moore was drum major of the parade. He opened that sixth inning with the third hit yielded by Crowder—a slashing single into left field that dropped at the feet of Manush. With Hugh Critz at bat, the bunt play was on, and the Washington infielders appropriately drawn in. Bunt, Critz did, but First Baseman Joe Kuhel pounced on the ball, whipped it to second base and Moore was forced out.

Terry Slams Double.

Manager Bill Terry, next at the plate, met the issue like the leader he is. A two-base hit bounded off Terry's bat, a soft looper into left field, and Critz went to third. Along came Mel Ott, the slugging hero of the day before. Strategy demanded that he be passed deliberately. He was. His successor at the plate, Davis, was no great shucks as a hitter. But Davis was not to bat for the Giants. Meeting the strategy with strategy, Terry motioned for the ungainly figure of Lefty O'Doul, ambling from the dugout with bat in hand. O'Doul, the batting champion of the National League was going to pinch hit. And pinch hit he did. A clean single into center field emptied the filled bases of two of its occupants, and Ott advanced to third. The Giants had taken a 2-to-1 lead.

Travis Jackson was next. The veteran of the 1924 campaign against the Nats swung at the first pitch. Another single to center. Ott scored, O'Doul went to third.

Mancuso's Bunt Perfect.

Gus Mancuso was next. Mancuso, the slowest runner on the Giants and not even a good hitter. And then Manager Terry, Mancuso and the Giants scaled the strategical heights. For Mancuso dumped a perfect bunt down the third base line, catching both Crowder and Ossie Bluege unaware, while O'Doul scored from third on the squeeze play and Mancuso made first safely on the hit. The Giants were now ahead, 4-1. Mancuso on first and Jackson on second.

Shortstop Blondy Ryan let a third strike by Crowder whizz past and become the second out. But Pitcher Schumacher smashed a single between Cronin and Bluege to score Jackson and the Giants had their fifth run. The rout tokened no end. Moore, up for the second time, bashed a single through the box and the Giants had their sixth run.

Crowder needed no urging to leave the box, leaving the scene of his failure with no more concern than when he had accepted the task. Al Thomas succeeded him. Critz made a scratch hit that filled the bases again, but the flood was checked when Terry hit into a force play for the third out. The game was beyond reclaim by the Nats.

The brilliant Schumacher had met his hardest test an inning before. Goslin had singled and Manush had walked. It appeared that Washington's 1-0 lead would be greatly augmented. But, facing the concentration of strength in the middle of the Nats' batting order, he won the battle.

Schulte's presence at the plate Schumacher met unswervingly, and forced him to ground to Jackson, who ran Goslin down between third and the plate. In a hole against Hubbell, he walked him quite intentionally and filled the bases. Ossie Bluege he struck out to end the inning. It was his big test and he won it.

Favored Golfers Fail to Shine in First Round of P. G. A. Play.

FOUR Washington and four Baltimore golf pros survived the first round of match play in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. championship yesterday at Chevy Chase.

The District men who will battle in the quarter finals this morning are Al Treder, of Manor; Mel Shorey, of East Potomac; Cliff Spencer, of Beaver Dam,, and Arthur B. Thorn, unattached. The Baltimore survivors are Glenn Spencer, defending champion; Ralph Beach, Alec Taylor and Charlie Betschler.

Once-Overs

By H. I. Phillips.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, N. Y., Oct. 4.—Charges by Washington that Stoneham, Terry & Ott, Inc., refinishers of underdogs and dark horses, were violating their NRA code were ignored by the corporation today when it resumed Tuesday's operations.

Stoneham, Terry & Ott, Inc., continued the economic recovery established and pursed under their own steam all summer, and won by a landslide.

Despite the Washington contention that the code regarding worm turning was unethical, the Giants went ahead with their act, returning on the heat with a fury hitherto unsuspected.

It all happened in one inning, the socking sixth, when the Terry fusileers got all their runs in an episode that had all the chaotic disorder of the attack on the National Hotel in Havana, Cuba.

The shooting was just as wild and the noise only a trifle less disturbing.

• • • •

For once in a world series a pinch hitter made good and it was so startling that it fired the home club with a new enthusiasm.

• • • •

For that one inning they looked like nine Babe Ruths.

• • • •

• • • •

Mr. Crowder, who seemed to be going along under perfect control up to this point, suddenly began to unravel rapidly and go from bad to worse.

• • • •

Everything happened in that socking sixth except arson, mutiny and outright kidnaping.

• • • •

• • • •

Today the Giants were as brilliant in the field as at bat, and the most humiliated people in America are the experts who said in April that the boys weren't a formidable ball team.

• • • •

It's all done by mirrors.

• • • •

Hal Schumacher, fresh from college this summer, and playing in a world series in his first season in big league baseball, was so good that he looked like Hubbell's twin.

• • • •

Schumacher was graduated from St. Lawrence University in June. He is in fact the first man to leave college and find work since the depression.

• • • •

This alone makes him a great character.

• • • •

He was no strike-out king today, but he allowed only five hits, and the only run was a homer by the big, bad Goose.

• • • •

General Crowder depended a great deal on superstition each time that he used the resin he tossed the bag around his left side like a contortionist, this being an old good luck omen of his.

• • • •

But the Giants were hitting at the ball, not at the resin bag, and superstition hit a new low for the movement.

• • • •

The Nats got off to a start with a homer early in the game, and again in the sixth they had a great chance to pile up a lead, when, with three on bases wigwagging "We do our part," Bluege struck out.

• • • •

The Giants were taking full advantage of all situations and the visitors were not.

• • • •

One of the surprises of the day was the big drop in cash customers. There were wide open spaces in the stands, and for the first time in years the bleachers were not crowded in a world series game in New York.

• • • •

Among the ironies of life, as revealed today, is the spectacle of One-Eyed Connolly, king of the gate crashers, as a hired hand keeping other people from sneaking in.

• • • •

It just goes to show how far a guy can go with an idea and lots of perseverance.

• • • •

Another ironical touch was the appearance of two little pigs as Washington mascots. They were labeled, "Who's Afraid of the Big, Bad Giants?" Secretary Wallace kills six million porkers to solve the pork problem, and these two manage to escape and make a world series.

• • • •

The scene now shifts to the banks of the Potomac, with the Giants violating not only all the codes, but all the precedents and predictions.

• • • •

• • • •

Late last night Gen. Johnson was reported to have taken a hand and threatened to crack down on Stoneham, Terry & Ott, Inc., if they didn't sign up and pipe down.

Thousands See Stribling in Coffin

Notables Send Messages as Body Lies in State; Funeral Today.

MACON, Ga., Oct. 4 (AP).—Thousands filed past the bier of William Lawrence (Young) Stribling, Georgia heavyweight boxer, as his body lay in state at the City Auditorium today.

For a brief period the auditorium was closed to the public, and the boxer's wife, convalescing from the birth of a child, was taken to the bier.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Stribling, sr., his parents, and his brother, Herbert, were present when the fighter's wife came to the auditorium. The family remained alone with the body for a few minutes. Mrs. Stribling, jr., left in tears, but she was calm as she stood by the casket.

Afterward, the doors were thrown open again.

Was Hurt Internally.

Stribling died yesterday from injuries received Sunday, when his motorcycle and an automobile collided. He lost a foot in the crash and suffered internal injuries and a crushed pelvis.

Public funeral services will be held in the Auditorium here tomorrow at 4 o'clock, conducted by the Rev. J. E. Sammons, of the First Baptist Church. The Shrine, National Guard, and other organizations will take part.

A coroner's jury examined the body before it was taken to the Auditorium and an inquest will be held Friday in an effort to fix the blame for the accident. Sheriff J. R. Hicks, jr., said he believed the accident was unavoidable.

Planes Escort Cortege.

A squadron of planes from the 457th Squadron of the Army Air Corps Reserve will fly overhead as the cortege moves to Riverside Cemetery in tribute to Stribling, who was a member of the pursuit squadron.

Thousands of telegrams have poured in to the Stribling family yesterday and today.

The great of the prize ring—Dempsey, Sharkey, Johnny Risko, Schmeling and Joe Jacobs, manager of Mike McTigue and Max Schmeling—all sent messages of condolence.

There were other notables listed among the sympathetic including Postmaster General James A. Farley, L. W. Robert, an Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; Gov. Talmadge, Senator George and many others.

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

NEW York, N. Y., Oct. 4.—I don't know when to quit, I guess. Both eyes closed, cut and bleeding, when I was caught on the rebound of what I said about the Giants, I'm not throwing in the towel. They'll have to count me out. Here comes the third game of the series and I have a grand batting average of .000. I've been done wrong by the Nats, the Giants, and Mae West could make it unanimous. But I'm still sticking in there, exposing my chin to what ever comes my way. After this, I'm gonna learn to duck.

But I told my story before the series began, and if I'm stuck with it, I might as well stick to it. Old Joe Grimm himself, that's Povich. Can I take it? Can I take it? I used to be able to hand it out, if I do say so myself, but I guess the old boy's slipping.

Beginning to Doubt.

Yesterday, in that first game of the series, I saw nothing concerning the Giants, with the exception of Hubbell, that caused me to view the situation with alarm last night. Excepting Hubbell is a big item, but I was prepared to except him for the time being.

Today, after the second game of the series, I am beginning to doubt my prophetic powers. A fellow can't except Schumacher along with Hubbell and have a whole lot left to conjure with. Perhaps it would be better to except the rest of the Giants and consider only Hubbell and Schumacher.

That wouldn't do, either. Today the rest of the Giants demonstrated almost to my complete satisfaction why they won the National League pennant and revised some of the opinions of this department. The guys hit the ball, they fielded the ball and they had another great pitcher. O, woe is me.

Thrown Down by Nats.

The Giants have crossed me up, and the Nats have thrown me down. That's it. The Nats have thrown me down. What became of the great pitching Walter Stewart and Al Crowder showed during the regular season? Base hits, that's what it became, Giant base hits. And what became of the Nats' great hitting? It was kidnaped by a couple of gents disguised as Giant pitchers.

But I'm sticking in there. Earl Whitehill goes for the Nats tomorrow, and it's not in the books for Fred Fitzsimmons to turn in the same kind of a performance as Hubbell and Schumacher. And if I had my choice of any Washington pitcher to oppose Carl Hubbell in that fourth game on Thursday, I'd take Monte Weaver, who'll pitch it.

Whitehill and Weaver won't be forced to pitch slow and outside to the Giants in Griffith Stadium like Stewart and Crowder had to pitch in the Polo Grounds. They can't turn on those inside balls and pop them into convenient home runs. The Giants, who play 77 games in their home lot every year, have had lots of practice throwing 'em low and outside.

I've been following the Nats for nigh on to seven months this season and, if you're asking me, they're great come-from-behinders. They came from behind to beat the Yankees for the pennant and methinks they'll come from behind to beat the Giants in the world series. I withdraw that remark about Washington winning in five games.

If you're asking me, the break of that game today was a dinky little tick foul that dropped out of Luke Sewell's mitt in that sixth inning, when the Giants made all those runs that beat the Nats.

Lefty O'Doul was pinch hitting up there with the bases loaded and two strikes on him. Crowder actually had him struck out in a noble performance. O'Doul's bat had just nicked the ball and deflected it into Sewell's mitt. Crowder apparently had pulled out of a deep hole in the ground. Thus given a reprieve, O'Doul socked the next pitch for a single to center field that drove in the tying and winning run.

There's a story going the rounds that Joe Shaute, left-handed pitcher of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who finished in seventh place this season, was the unidentified hero of that second game of the world series today. It's all very reund-about. It seems that early last season, Shaute, pitching for the Dodgers, broke the wrist of Bill Terry, who was at bat for the Giants. Terry had to use a substitute first baseman, Sam Leslie, by name.

It seems that Leslie played a very swell game for the Giants while Terry was convalescing, and afeared for his job, or some other reason, Terry was determined to trade Leslie. The Giants needed hitting strength, and the Dodgers needed a first baseman.

So, it came to pass that the Giants traded Leslie to the Dodgers for one Lefty O'Doul. Today in the sixth inning, O'Doul broke up the second game of the world series. And that is how, my children, that Joe Shaute becomes the unsung hero of the second game of the world series.

Giants Fans' Dirge Irks Visitors

Young Manager's Faith in Charges Not as Exuberant.

Crowder's Superstition on Rummy Game Fails to Click.

CRONIN is a better baseball manager than he is a prophet. In the Nats' locker room before yesterday's game, he predicted a sure Washington victory.

"It'll either be a close, hard battle, or we'll bust loose and win in a walk," he said. "Remember, we used, to always come back one of those ways during the regular season?"

But something went amiss and Old Man Precedent was looking out of the window when the Nats tried to make their comeback to even the 1933 world title series with the Giants at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon. So last night Cronin and his charges, wending their way homeward to continue play on their home heath, were somewhat disheartened.

Cronin, himself, is still the fighting Irishman he always has been. That jaw of his is protruded when he talks of the two games already played, and he still has faith in himself and his team.

"We'll Get 'Em," Cronin Says.

"Don't worry, we'll get 'em," he said, but there is no question but what he is not as sure of his Nats winning the world title as he was two days ago. True, he shouldn't be as sure. In the first game, Carl Hubbell, the screw-ball left-hander made monkeys of the Nats, while the Giants pounded Walter Stewart, one of his "big three", out of the box. And yesterday, General Al Crowder, his best bet, was pummelled and beaten.

Cronin, however, may be depended upon to give the Giants a battle to the end, and, knowing his ability as a back-slapper, he probably will have his charges in the same mood when they take the field at Griffith Stadium today.

As to the rest of the Nats, there is no question but what their spirits have dropped and that they are low mentally. In the locker room before yesterday's game, Crowder, who is quite superstitious, remembered that during the season he won most of his games following a precontest card session of rummy. So he yelled to Goose Goslin to get the pasteboards for a game, first making sure that none of the lockerroom boys had washed his sweat shirt.

Funeral March Irks Nats.

"I haven't had it washed all season for fear of changing my luck," he explained, displaying a frayed and worn shirt which was almost stiff from previous "sweatings."

The rummy game must have helped Goslin, for he clouted out his seventh world series homer in the third, which was, incidentally, his twentieth series hit and his fourteenth series run batted in. But Crowder suddenly discovered that his system works only during the regular season and that he will have to discover another for world series play.

As the Nats entered their locker room individually before yesterday's game the sun gods in the center field stands, which adjoin the clubhouse, hummed a funeral march, and they did it again as the team took the field after getting into uniform. Cronin and his boys thought this was very funny then, but when the same gang gathered around their taxis as they were leaving for the Pennsylvania station after the game and hummed it again, it did not strike the Nats as so funny. In fact, several threatened to get out of the cabs and do a little fancy chastising.

Man Falls Lifeless While Hearing Game

Ardmore, Okla., Oct. 5 (AP).—Stokesley Claudle, 35, fell dead today while listening to an account of the second world's series game at New York

Series Notes

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Oct. 4 (Spl.).—Sport writers from Cuba, Chile, Japan and England were in the press box.

Peanuts, "cullud drinks" and red hots are still the menu of the bleacherites as well as box-seat holders and grandstand ducat holders. Coney Island red hots are strictly hot dogs surrounded by a lengthy looking bun.

Goose Goslin's homer was the seventh in world series play. He hit three each in 1924 and 1925 series. Babe Ruth holds the record of 13 in championship embroglios.

Spectacular plays and slashing hits by the Nats received as much ovation as those of the Giants.

One of the freak bets of yesterday's game was who would relieve Schumacher if he were knocked out of the box. Herman Bell and Adolph Luque both went out in the bull pen the two times the young Giant tosser was no the verge of wobbling.

The Giants got a big kick out of Mancuso's perfectly executed squeeze play in the sixth, which caught the Nats flat footed. "That was the straw that broke their backs," exclaimed one of the National Leaguers.

As usual, Babe Ruth was awarded a mixture of hand clapping, hoorahs and the well-known Bronx cheer. The Sultan of Swat returned the concoction with a good-natured grin.

Bets Favoring Giants by 3 to 1

Jack Doyle Also Quotes 10-to-7 Odds That Nats Win Today.

THE New York Giants, with two world series victories to their credit, now are 3-to-1 favorites to win the championship of 1933.

Jack Doyle, Broadway betting commissioner last night quoted 3 to 1 against the Washington Nationals to win the series, with practically no money coming in from the dwindling ranks of American League supporters.

On today's game, however, the odds favor the Washington club. The quotations in New York gambling circles are 7 to 10 against the Nats to win behind Whitehill today, with the Giants, despite their two victories, held at 6 to 5.

There was such a rush of money on the American League contenders yesterday that the price against the Washington club was only 1 to 2 at game time.

The odds are now 3 to 1 that the Giants will win two consecutive games, and 12 to 5 that the Nationals will fail to get the next two.

Doyle paid off two large bets yesterday to gamblers who had picked Mel Ott, of the Giants, and "Goose" Goslin, of the Nats, to hit home runs, at even money.

Crowd Cheers Schumacher In Victory

ned Oswald Bluege, to put an end to this menacing scoring threat.

As the third strike plunked into Gus Mancuso's big mitt, the crowd came to its feet in one vast roar of triumph. Fans were howling not only for this neat defensive effort on the youngster's part, but because they sensed the sudden change that strike out wrought in the New York club. And when Moore, striding to the plate to face Crowder with new confidence, slashed a single over third base, the pandemonium was on.

The story of that climatic half inning, in which 12 Giants went to bat and 6 scored, is, of course, the story of the ball game and as such belongs within the province of Messrs. Shirley Povich and Frank Young.

But if you know how it feels to open a letter from the income tax bureau and find you have a refund coming, or to have that lawyer's letter turn out to be an announcement that Aunt Petunia has remembered you royally in her will, you have some conception of the high joy and rejoicing among New York fandom as its inspired Giants wore down the base paths in the rush around to home plate.

Fans Swarm on Field.

Within a very short time the crowd was swarming across the field—which now, alas, may have no further use as a world series setting until another autumn—streaming to the exits on the heels of the once more jubilant Giants, some to follow their heroes to the scene of the remaining battles in Washington, a majority to rest content with having witnessed two such decisive triumphs.

The exodus of fans to Washington for the games at Griffith Stadium was smaller than when the two clubs last met there, back in 1924. Only the two ball clubs and the baseball writers needed special trains, the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio systems taking care of the few thousand fans on regularly scheduled trains. The days when the "royal Giant rooters" made world series nights hideous with their exuberant clamor—win, lose or draw—are part of baseball's past.

Aside from the tumult in the sixth inning, there was seldom a less demonstrative world series crowd than today's. Attendance figures, announced as 35,461, meant that the towering stands could have accommodated fully 15,000 more, standing and sitting.

Wind Hampers Nats.

A strong north wind was snapping the flags atop the stadium when the teams took the field this afternoon, and, while it was the lightning loosed by Hal Schumacher's right hand, by Lefty O'Doul's "second guess" base hit, and by Moore's two slashing singles off Crowder which decided the outcome, the half-gale whipping across the Harlem River didn't help the Nats a bit.

Once the wind took hold of a high, twisting foul from Moore's bat and wrenched it just beyond Heinie Manush's reach. Again, when Gus Mancuso had misjudged a high foul which, had it fallen safely to earth would have given Joe Cronin another chance, and possibly changed the whole outcome, the half-gale sent the ball swerving into the New York catcher's mitt.

No wind, however, could have changed the course of the ball "Goose" Goslin smashed to the upper right field stands, 294 feet from home plate, with two out in the third. That ball was a home run ball in any one's park—the larger the park the longer the homer.

Fans Wanted Hubbell.

It looked for a while this afternoon as though these Gotham fans, whose joy in whacking a winner on the back is only exceeded by their delight in stomping on a loser, would not enthuse over Hal Schumacher. When Buddy Myer walked to start the game, there resounded from stand and bleacher unmistakable, unmelodious expressions of displeasure. There were cries of "Hey, put in Hubbell."

But by the end of the first half of the sixth inning, when the young collegian had struggled so gallantly through some trying moments, with Nationals on every base and others clamoring to take their places, the crowd was with him to its last hoarse holler. And when Hal's teammates, taking inspiration from that effort, routed Crowder and clinched a second world series victory, New York took Schumacher to its collective bosom and bade him write his own ticket.

Meade Rides Kings Minstrel, Paying $8.80; to Win in Nameless Laurel Feature

Fortification Is Length In Rear

Mad Eagle and Off Duty Set Early Pace, but Later Fall Behind.

LAUREL RACE TRACK, Md., Oct. 4 (AP).—George D. Widener's Kings Minstrel, ridden by Jockey Don Meade, cleverly defeated seven other 2-year-olds in the nameless feature of an off-day racing card here this afternoon. Glen Riddle's Fortification, the public choice, was second, and Leon Haymaker's Slipper King third.

Kings Minstrel was second choice in the field, paying $8.80. He whirled over six furlongs of a fast track in the brisk time of 1:12 3-5.

Good Crowd Present.

Despite cloudy skies and a card of six claiming races and a maidens' test, a good crowd attended. Racing was spirited but favorites had a rough passage throughout the card.

Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Abbot, after breaking virtually last in his field, finished with a whirl of speed which sent him on to an easy three lengths victory at the end of the 5½ furlongs of the opening number, a test for maiden 2-year-olds. The son of Sunbriar paid $13.60; White Cloud was second and Round Table third. Stand Pat, the odds-on favorite, was never a factor in the running.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The Braille system by which blind persons read, is a system of raised dots in paper, the dots being arranged in different grouping so as to form a code which represents the different letters of the alphabet. The letter "a," for example, is represented by a single raised dot; "b" is formed by two dots, one above the other; "c" by two dots in the same horizontal line; while "e" is made by two dots diagonally opposite each other, the upper being to the left of the lower.

The raised dots are readily visible to the sighted person, and with a little practice it becomes fairly simple to read the Braille system by sight. It is, however, next to impossible—or at least so far as is known it has never been done—for a person with sight to learn Braille by touch. The Braille Institute of America knows of no one with sight who has ever accomplished this feat.

Strange as it seems, she can not read the system by touch. J. Robert Atkinson, blind manager of the institute, said in this connection:

"In my 21 years of work for the blind, since losing my own sight, I have never heard of an individual with sight who mastered tactile reading or in fact who could read anything at all by touch, except possibly pick out a letter or two here and there."

Dear Al: Laurel Race Track.

The great Bennings was in fair form today. Kicked home a couple of winners and had several in the pay, including Round Table, which finished third as I said he would. The mutuel was $17.40 for third. Stone Martin was the only favorite to score and we had him, of course. Forgot to tell you that Jimmy Sullivan lost his apprentice allowance yesterday. The son of the Washington A. A. U. official is now a full-fledged jockey. Everyone here is hot for a Jamestown-Winooka race.

BILL.

First race—I warned you sometime ago that Cantersine was a smart youngster. She ran a good race in her only outing and may be able to take care of a field of this sort now that she has some education. Candescent is the probable favorite and the one to beat. Taunton for the show.

Second race—The Gen takes off weight and is my choice to grab off the majority of this purse. The bad-legged but consistent Aegis will have much to say before the numbers are recorded. Cantoria may surprise with a money appearance.

Third race—Afloat could win this jumping race if not handled too enthusiastically during the first part. Balada and Depart appear to have an edge on the others.

Fourth race—At first glance, Believe appears to be over his head among these. However, I understand this fellow has a winning effort up his sleeve. Give him a chance. Can't Remember's last was a beaut. Pretentious to take care of the rest.

Fifth race—Resisting has been tipped and tipped and ran a bang-up race last out. Let's send him after the big dough today and see what he can do. Pompoleon was claimed from the Labrot Stable up the line but is dangerous here. Vote for the show.

HERE YOU ARE — FIVE CENTS —
HI, RED — HOW MANY YOU SOLD
FOUR SACKS
ME TOO. SAY, I BET IF WE MADE A LOTTA MONEY WITH THIS WE COULD START SELLIN' CANDY, AN' PRETTY SOON WE COULD OWN A STORE — AN' THEN MEBBE A WHOLE STRING OF STORES —
SURE — AN' WE COULD BUILD OUR OWN FACTORY, TOO — AN' OWN A MILLION TRUCKS, AN' — The George Matthew Adams Service, Inc.
BOY!
HOW DO YOU EXPECT TO SELL YOUR POP CORN IF YOU DON'T PAY ANY ATTENTION TO YOUR CUSTOMERS —

Walt Mason, Himself

We have learned our lesson, surely, since the big depression came; after this we'll walk securely, and we'll play a cautious game. Not for us the wild investing that we did in other times, on our savings we'll be resting, husbanding the hard-earned dimes. Not for us the dizzy chances that we took when we were young; we won't cast our longing glances at the snares by fakers sprung. Thus we talk as we go steaming up and down the village street; not for us fantastic scheming, safety is our first retreat. Thus we talk while we are busted, as we jog around in pairs; we are weary and disgusted with all gins and traps and snares. Better earn some honest smackers, breaking stone or laying tiles, than to class with gambling stackers, stacking fortunes up in piles. Things, they say, are now improving, trade now thaws that used to freeze, commerce once again is moving, coin will grow upon the trees. We'll be drawing better wages, soon we may have coin to spare; will we then behave like sages, shunning every trick and snare? Will we be the same old suckers on that bright and cheerful morn, going in our bibs and tuckers to the market to be shorn? Much I fear we'll be forgetting all the lessons we have learned, all the losses and the fretting when the tide at last has turned.

The Gumps There's a Sad Face at the Window

I WONDER WHERE HE CAN BE SO LONG-
AFTER TWELVE- HE'S NEVER LEFT ME ALONE THIS LATE BEFORE-
SOUND ASLEEP- NO NEED TO WAKE HIM- HE COULDN'T HELP ME- IF I JUST KNEW POOR GRANDPA WAS SAFE- I WONDER WHAT ALL THOSE DOGS WERE BARKING FOR AWHILE AGO-
GRANDPA! OH, GRANDPA! WHERE ARE YOU? WHY DON'T YOU COME HOME? IT'S SO DARK AND I'M AFRAID!

I'LL HURRY AN' TIDY UP TH' HOUSE — OH, I DO HOPE, PA, HE'LL HAVE TH' SORT OF PROPOSITION YOU WANT —

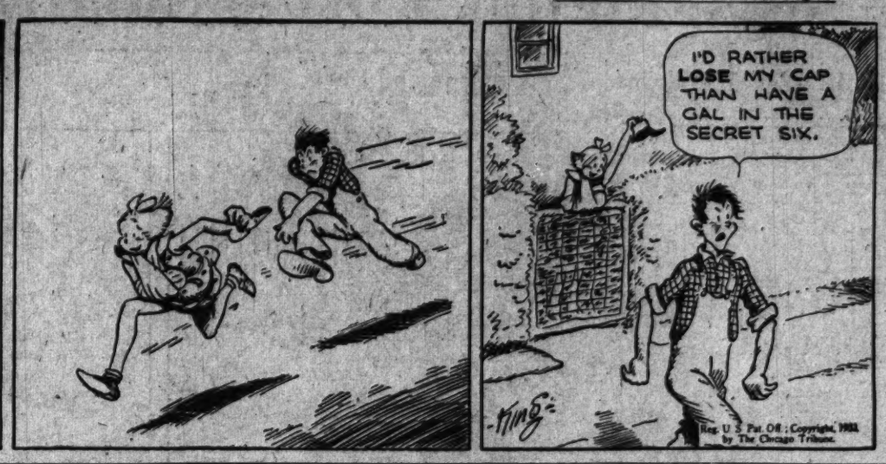
It's a Matter of Principle



Bad Break in Sixth Is Costly to Nats

Then came the Nats' big chance, when they had their turn at the tee in the sixth. Goslin opened with a single and Manush coaxed a pass. This put it up to Manager Cronin, and the Giants took a big chance by betting that Cronin either would sacrifice or would not be able to hit a ball toward short.

So Skipper Bill Terry, of the Giants, had Travis Jackson play in close for a possible bunt and Shortstop Blondy Ryan stand on second, so that Goslin could get no lead off the sack.

Cronin took two strikes trying to shoot the ball through this vacant spot and then popped to Catcher Gus Mancuso. A wild pitch, which looked like a minor break at the time, let both men advance and put it up to Fred Schulte. His best was a roller to Jackson, on which Goslin was nipped at the plate. Kuhel worked a base on balls, crowding the runways and Ossie Bluege was up.

Ossie Fizzles Again.

Ossie had fanned three times yesterday—once in the ninth with the two tying runs on the bases—and this was his chance to redeem himself. He failed, however, striking out again—and his third swing without a question was the turning point of the game.

Had Bluege delivered, the Nats' lead would have been doubled, possibly tripled; the Nats would have been all keyed up; the Giants' morale would have sunk to a new series low, and there is no telling but what the Nats would have won out by a comfortable margin.

But Bluege did not deliver; it was the Nats' morale which was lowered, and the Giants' which was raised, and the National Leaguers came in from the field and won the game in their half of the round.

Passers' Backs For Battle Picked

Fenlon Slated to Begin for Locals Against Chicago.

The Washington Passers, the Capital's bid for the pro football ranks, who will battle the Chicago Bears at Griff Stadium next Wednesday evening under the lights, probably will start with Fenlon, George Washington; Bankhead, Texas; Ducky Holmes, Nebraska, and Lawrence, Western Maryland, in the back field, announces George Smythe.

The local eleven, which opened the season in Newark, N. J., last Sunday afternoon against the Orange (N. J.) Tornados, have been practicing diligently the past three weeks and should be in the prime of condition when they take the field against the big leaguers next week.

Outstanding performers in the Bear line-up are Red Grange, Bronko Nagurski, George Trafton, Johnny Sisk and John Doehring, high school southpaw pass heaver, who can send the leather flying through the air 75 yards.

Runaway Girl Home; $4,000 In Gems Safe

Carries Mother's Jewels Safely on Long Tour; Spends $705.

"My baby!"

Those words last night capped the three weeks' adventure of 15-year-old Sylvia Blumberg as she was folded, weeping and laughing, in the comforting arms of her mother.

Lugging a small satchel with her mother's $4,000 collection of fine old jewelry, Sylvia had been to the Century of Progress.

Visited New Orleans.

Pretty, hazel-eyed, intelligent-looking Sylvia disappeared September 16. Since then Washington police have conducted an intensive search for her. Thousands of circulars were sent all over the Nation. Last night the drive bore fruit.

Comes From Canton.

Yesterday Sylvia came from Canton, Ohio, to Alexandria. There she took a room. Last night police got the tip. With an older sister, they dashed to the nearby city and took Sylvia, unprotesting. Another trip netted the jewelry and the girl's possessions.

Mrs. Blumberg, with a dozen kin, hurried to police headquarters. She didn't stop to don her street clothes. She came in her house dress, without a coat.

The girl hadn't told last night why she left her family and created such a furore. But she was glad to be back. And she cried softly and stroked the doll as her mother kept repeating "my baby."

Found After Travels With Jewels

Lombard Named French Attache

Remembered Here From Assignment in 1919.

Lieut. Col Emmanuel Lombard, who first came here in 1919 as assistant military attache to the French Embassy, was appointed military attache in Washington by the French government last week. He replaces Gen. Pillon, who is returning to France.

Col. Lombard married Helen Carussi in 1926 and remained in Washington two years. He was then transferred to France, where he served with an artillery regiment at Grenoble.

Serving with Gen. Peyton March in France, in 1917, Col. Lombard was awarded the American Distinguished Service Medal. He is the only foreign military attache in Washington to hold this honor.

School Board Halts "Married Person" Ruling

Special Committee Will Continue Study Before Decision Is Made.

Action on the "married persons" problem in the District school system was deferred again yesterday by the Board of Education, pending further study by a special committee.

Henry Gilligan, board member, objected to delay and contended teachers did not come under provisions of the economy act as they are classified as Civil Service employes.

Henry I. Quinn, chairman of the special committee, declared the problem was not as simple as it appeared. He said the board could not solve the problem merely by deciding teachers were not under the law.

"We might appoint married teachers, only to have them resign," he said, "when some Government official said she or her husband would have to quit."

In the cases of teachers who have resigned and then asked for reinstatement, the committee is making a study of each case. One such teacher was reinstated, but in that case the teacher submitted conclusive evidence her husband's position in Government service was no longer in jeopardy by her teaching.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent, was instructed by the board to confer with Maj. E. W. Brown and the director of traffic as to the possibility of closing streets near schools for skating during recess periods to escape street accidents.

Col. Wade H. Cooper, president of the bank, was verbally attacked and defended in debate over membership of the committee. He was not present.

One committee was chosen in the first 30 minutes and the meeting adjourned. Ten minutes later after half the crowd had gone home, Arthur Clarendon Smith, president of the Central Business Men's Association, chairman, threw the depositors into turmoil by shouting:

"Come back and sit down. This meeting isn't over. These men you've elected are Cooper men. This is all a put up job. There is something crooked about it."

Cooper Group Protests.

Cooper adherants shouted protests as Smith pounded his gavel for order and said some of the members of the original committee had not been asked to serve.

The first committee was named in a resolution adopted before the first adjournment. It comprised F. P. Wilcox, Mr. Smith, Dr. Robert B. Tyler, Harold H. Shaller, Arthur L. Thompson and W. W. Chambers.

As the depositors filed back to their seats, Al Masters, a member of the group calling the meeting, demanded reconsideration of the resolution.

New Committee Named.

"These names," Masters charged, "were railroaded through. This is an important committee. Don't let anybody flimflam a committee through. The only way to get a break is to form a committee that will work in the interest of the 12,000 depositors."

The meeting then proceeded to elect a new committee, composed of Theodore S. Grape, Mr. Masters, Mr. Thompson, J. E. Smith, Dr. Tyler, Mrs. W. C. Bullis and Harry Kahn.

Asserting his clients, Woodward & Parker, obtained a building permit for the area, Fenning declared the commission could not change the zoning from commercial to residential "A." Edwin S. Hege, of the Federation of Citizens Associations, pointed out the permit was obtained Tuesday.

The commission suggested certain commercial property facing Wisconsin avenue be changed to residential "A" in exchange for an extension of another commercial tract on Wisconsin avenue. All property holders were agreeable except Fenning.

The commission will meet in executive session Monday to pass upon this and other petitions.

A similar problem was raised by a petition from a group of Brightwood residents asking a rezoning in an area bounded by Sixth, Seventh and Nicholson streets to prevent the construction of an apartment house.

Three Arrests Lead to Lien Suit on Church

$16,556 Demanded for Work as Aftermath of Extortion Charges.

As an aftermath of the arrest of two men and a woman lawyer on charges of extortion from the Rev. Charles O. Rosensteel, rector, a mechanic's lien for $16,556.24 was filed yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court, Rockville, Md., against St. John's Catholic Church, Forest Glen, Md.

The suit was filed by attorneys for Richard J. Brinker and Karl J. Brinker, who with Miss Elsie Cannon, prominent woman lawyer, were arrested September 15 by Headquarters Detective Earl P. Hartman, of Washington, and Sergt. Earl Thomas, of Takoma Park, Md.

The policemen declared they, unobserved, listened while the three demanded $19,000 from Father Rosensteel, in addition to $24,000 said to have been paid previously.

The work done on the church, it was said, consisted of shingling the bell tower and repairing various parts of the building. Complaints by parishioners led to the arrests. Father Rosensteel, 78, has been pastor 49 years.

The property was deeded to the church August 11, 1754.
